THREE NEW FREIGHT STEAMERS IN BOSTON SERVICE TO BE ADDED

Hamburg-American Line Directors on Visit Here Promise to Increase Transportation Facilities

LOOK OVER THE PIER

Governor's Council Meets to Consider Release of Agreement But Postpones Action For Another Week

While officials of the Hamburg-American line, which is to begin service here next May, were inspecting the Boston harbor front today, it was announced through the Boston agency of the Holland-American that according to advices from the head office at New York, three new freight steamers of 10,000 tons each are now under construction for the Rotterdam and Boston service. The steamers are the Noorderdyk, Westerdyk and Oosterdyk.

Since about three years ago, when the Hamburg-Boston line dropped its service between this port and Rotterdam and the Holland-American line took it up, the business has shown a steady increase. The steamers recently have brought in full cargoes for this port and Philadelphia and they now run a fortnightly service here while formerly there was only one boat a month.

The general outlook is said to be very bright for this line and it is recognized among the most prosperous of the port. The steamers which at present maintain the local service are the Zuiderdyk, Zyldyk, Sloterdyk and Soestdyk. The new boats will be strictly freight steamers.

Action on the sanctioning of the agreement to cancel the lease of Commonwealth dock in order to accommodate the Hamburg-American line was post-

INTERESTS OF NEW ENGLAND SLIGHTED SAYS E. D. CODMAN

Edmund D. Codman, former president of the Fitchburg road, appeared before Charles A. Prouty, chairman of the interstate commerce commission, in the Federal building today, and claimed discrimination against New England interests, by the control of the New Haven road, in the purchase of supplies for the road. This attack on the integrity of the road brought out a stirring defense of the company by Edward G. Buckland, the vice-president; and Edgar J. Rich, solicitor-general of the Boston & Maine.

Mr. Buckland denied that the New Haven was favoring other interests outside of New England, and said that the charges concerning the purchase of supplies had been previously investigated and disproved. Mr. Buckland sought to examine Mr. Codman for the purpose of finding out what the charges were based on, and the witness declined to answer the questions, unless the road would answer one of his in return. Mr. Codman then made a statement, in which he said:

"My statement amounts to a complaint that discrimination against New England has resulted from trunk line ownership of New Haven shares. The Pennsylvania owns 40,000 shares, the New York Central more than 50,000 shares. This is a small minority of the whole, but it is common knowledge that it suffices for control. If it does not suffice, why then do these trunk lines spend their money in buying great blocks of New Haven shares?

"The purpose of the Trunk line stock ownership is to secure and control the business of New England; in other words, to check competition by coastwise lines and Canadian railroads."

THOUSAND WORK TO DISMANTLE THE GREAT ELECTRIC EXHIBITION

Show Taking Two Years of Preparation Is Packed up and Scattered in Less Than Four Days

GLIMPSE OF WORK

Ten-thirty was the hour indicated on the big clock in the main hall, and it was Saturday night at the great show which had just come to a close. But even while the last crowd that had helped make up the half million visitors in attendance during the exposition was surging streetward, in various parts of the building men numbering a round thousand were already beginning the dismantling process. Before the last person who had visited the show reached the sidewalk work of disconnecting exhibits and preparing for carting away material was well under way.

Visitors to the one or other exhibition that requires much preparation and forethought scarcely realize the amount of labor necessary before all this picturesque arrangement and mechanical adjustment are complete. But even less thought is commonly given to the work of breaking up the show. It is not possible for those in charge of that task to wait until the last moment. Every minute counts, and in the manner of circus hands springing forward to remove

SHOOTING DESCRIBED IN THE ETTOR TRIAL

SALEM, Mass.—That a "tall man" fired a revolver directly at Officer Oscar Benoit simultaneously with the shooting of Annie Lopizzo, was testified to today in the Ettor-Giovannitti-Caruso trial by Robert Warner, a Boston newspaper man who was on the scene of the murder.

Warner did not name Caruso as the "tall man." He described the shooting.

After a three-day adjournment because of the absence of Juror John N. Carter, the trial was resumed this morning.

Eugene Bencordo, a brother of Charles Bencordo, the Italian detective who testified last week, resumed the stand when court opened. Attorney Peters opened a cross-examination of the witness. His brother, Charles Bencordo, was again in court, and District Attorney Attwill called him to the stand.

The state's attorney announced today that he expects to conclude the government's case by the end of the week.

REAL ESTATE DEAL INVOLVING $118,500 IN BOSTON PROPERTY

One of the largest real estate deals to become public recently is that in which Louisville V. Niles secures the property, corner of Columbus and Massachusetts avenues, 573-575 Columbus avenue, 434 Massachusetts avenue, and 426 Massachusetts avenue, from the Frederick A. Whitwell estate, and the passing to Frederick S. Whitwell by Mr. Niles of the Hotel Hancock, 36 Hancock street. The transaction was announced today through the office of W. J. McDonald. Carl F. Monk represented the buyer.

The property numbers 573-575 Columbus avenue and 434 Massachusetts avenue consists of a five-story brick building containing three stores and four large apartments, with 5350 square feet of land. It is assessed on a valuation of $93,500, of which $47,000 is carried on the land.

The plot No. 426 Massachusetts avenue is a four-story brick building, containing four apartments and 2250 square feet of land, and assessed for $8000, making a grand total valuation of land and buildings of $111,500. This sale, in addition to recent purchases by Mr. Niles of adjoining property, gives him a frontage of 140 feet on Columbus avenue and 150 feet on Massachusetts avenue, making it one of the most valuable corners in that section of Boston.

The Hotel Hancock has recently been modernized by the installation of elevator service and all the improvements of up-to-date apartments. It is a seven-story brick building and contains 11 apartments. It stands on a lot of land containing 2400 square feet, and is assessed for $10,800, making a total valuation of $39,000.

GERMAN SONDERS TO VISIT AMERICA FOR RACES IN SEPTEMBER

Followers of sonder yacht racing in this country are much pleased today over the announcement made that the fifth series of these races between American and German boats will be held off Marblehead next September under the auspices of the Eastern Yacht Club and the Kaiserlicher Yacht Club of Kiel, Germany. The races will be sailed under the rules of the International Yacht Racing Union.

The American trials will be held off Marblehead beginning Aug. 16, 1913, with the first international race in the same waters on Sept. 1. These trial races will be open to the yachts of any organized American yacht club and entries will close on July 19, 1913, with Henry Howard, chairman of the German-American race committee in this city. Entries will be restricted to boats completed and launched.

In such case yachts competing in the trials must be designed, built, and all sails, sail cloth and fittings made in the country to which they belong. The total cost of construction must not exceed $2400.

The German trials are expected to take place at Kiel in June.

The international contest between the countries for this type of boat now stands three American victories to one German.

GRAIN EXCHANGE AT COMMERCE CHAMBER

The members met shortly before noon in the committee room of the chamber, with Walter Smith as chairman. A constitution and by-laws were agreed on and submitted for approval to the directors of the chamber. Subject to their approval, permanent organization will be effected at a meeting on the first Wednesday in December, which is to become the date for the annual meeting of the exchange.

The following nominating committee was appointed to select a list of candidates for office: M. D. Benzequin, chairman, Daniel B. Joy, Arthur T. Glines, F. W. Wise, Herbert Hammond.

It is rumored that the object of the organization is to conduct the hay, grain, flour and feed business within the chamber, and to control the floor of the chamber with its boards of quotation of sales in other cities, for the exclusive benefit of those who pay for this service.

BOND ISSUE WILL AID MALDEN L EXTENSION

One of the principal works of construction to be carried on with the new stock issue of $4,000,000 and the bond issue of $5,000,000, which the Boston Elevated officials will vote upon Monday, will be the extension of the Elevated railway line to Malden square. There a terminal is to be erected at Center and Main streets, where the new power distributing station already is completed. The issue is also to include, in part, the new Cambridge subway, the East Cambridge viaduct and the new South Boston power station.

MERCHANTS AGAINST LIMITING AUTOS TO FIVE MINUTE STOPS

Proposal to Shorten Stay of Vehicles on Boylston Street Is Met With Vigorous Opposition at Hearing

NONE FAVORS PLAN

Chairman Gallivan Says That Street Commissioners Are Convinced That the Present Rules Are Satisfactory

Business interests along Boylston street were unanimous in opposition to the proposal to limit stops of automobiles and other vehicles to five minutes on the southerly side of Boylston street between Tremont street and Arlington street, at the hearing before the street commissioners today in the old aldermanic chamber. No one spoke in favor of the five minute plan.

James A. Gallivan presided and at the close of the hearing, while taking the matter under advisement, he said the street commissioners were convinced that the present traffic rules, permitting stops of 15 or 20 minutes for business purposes along Boylston street, were best for the public and for the business concerns, and permitted the best police protection. The hearing was called, he said, at the request of Mayor Fitzgerald, who felt that there should be a public threshing out of the many complaints that had reached him that there was automobile congestion on Boylston street. From the tone of Mr. Gallivan's remarks the commission will rule that no change is necessary.

Elbridge Anderson, counsel for the Boylston Street Merchants Association, said that he counted only 66 automobiles a minute pass up and down Boylston street at Park square at the busiest period last Saturday. He said conditions on the thoroughfare are not such as to necessitate any rule against vehicles standing at the curb long enough for the patrons of the banks and shops to transact business and make purchases. He offered photographs of traffic conditions in proof of his contentions.

Several individual merchants testified that the bulk of their business was with carriage and automobile trade and that any limiting of the stops to five minutes between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., as proposed, would reduce their business. This was concurred in by the representatives of the Thorndike hotel and the Colonial theater.

Denial that there were too many automobiles on Boylston street to permit the standing of cars at the curb was made by W. A. Thibodeau, representing the Automobile Legal Association and Francis Hurtubis and R. L. M. Townsend representing the National Automobile Association. The last named men approved the proposition to make Beacon street a one-way street between Park and Tremont streets. No one present could see any advantage in establishing a parking space on Arlington and Charles streets.

GREATEST STRUGGLE OF WAR, IS REPORT IN CONSTANTINOPLE

Declaration Also That Heavy Turkish Reinforcements Are Being Rushed to Aid Nazim Pasha

STRICT CENSORSHIP

Turkish Ministry Has Gone Out of Office Following Crisis and Kiamil Pasha Is the New Grand Vizier

Particular attention is called to the war news published on the authority of the European Bureau of The Christian Science Monitor. These despatches are sent us by the Bureau as quickly as the news is verified.

Other despatches carried in these columns from the scene of war are published on the authority of the United Press Associations.

[Special Cable to the Monitor from its European Bureau

LONDON—The fog in the theater of war is denser at the present moment than it has ever been. The telegrams which are coming in are wild and contradictory and are the natural effect of the severity of the censorship which has left the special correspondents in the rear of the armies to collect all sorts of rumors and telegraph them for want of real information.

It is probable that the reasons for preventing special correspondents going to the front are not entirely on the surface. In such a war as is taking place things are being done on both sides in all human probability which it would be undesirable to have printed in the papers of the world. Telegrams from the correspondent of the Reichspost, which in the early maneuvers were admirable, have now become information of a nature that no staff would permit to pass the censor except for its own purposes. Therefore the correspondent's information must be entirely discounted. To suppose that any correspondent would be allowed to tell the enemy where to make its stand is evidence simply of the fact that that is where the stand should not be made.

In these circumstances the real military authorities have practically retired from trying to define the positions of forces or to forecast movements. Only certain facts loom through the fog which are significant of what is happening.

The sudden mobilization of the Bulgarian last reserve and the special levy of younger men indicate that things are perhaps not quite so prosperous in Thrace as might be imagined.

Adrianople still holds out in spite of all the special messages which have announced again and again its immediate fall, and until it is taken a large proportion of the Bulgarian army is being held up. In the meantime it is known from private and reliable sources that heavy reinforcements are pouring through Constantinople from Anatolia. These are the real Turks, the Muhammadan peasantry, who, if they can be equipped and properly trained in time, are amongst the dourest fighters in the world.

The report that Nazim Pasha has taken command of the field army at Adrianople and that the great battle of the campaign is raging comes from Constantinople alone. It may be true, but it is entirely unsupported and it is just as likely to be a myth. If the report as received is true he must have decided to take the offensive and be advancing from the Ergene to the relief of Adrianople. Meantime the Turkish cabinet has resigned and Kiamil Pasha has been appointed grand vizier.

GENERAL EUROPEAN WAR AVERTED SAY REPORTS IN LONDON

(By the United Press)

LONDON—Despatches from Berlin credit the German foreign office with a statement that pourparlers going on between the powers have resulted in an Austro-Russian understanding which is about to be made public in an official communique.

The London Times says: The concert of Europe may not have averted a local war but it has been successful in its endeavors to preserve the larger peace of the continent.

The consensus of opinion based upon these semi-official and unofficial advices here is that the European diplomatic situation has undergone considerable improvement in the last 36 hours.

There appears to have been a modification of the position of Austro-Hungary which will permit a probable settlement of the Balkan question on a de facto basis.

(By the United Press)

NEW YORK—Baruch Bros. this morning received the following cable from London:

Much more confident feeling here and on the continent on favorable telegrams from Vienna announcing complete accord Austria and Russia, also willingness of Bulgaria to come to terms.

BALKAN ALLIES PLAN FEDERATION IF WAR PROVES SUCCESSFUL

(By the United Press)

COPENHAGEN—It is reported here that the Balkan allies plan to make Macedonia an independent country, if they wrest it from Turkey, and then to federate it with Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece, as well as with Rumania, if it will join. King George of Greece has been mentioned as a candidate for President of the federation.

Prince Harold, the King of Denmark's brother, has been asked by the Balkan states' diplomatic representatives here, if he will accept the crown of the prospective kingdom of Macedonia, it was reported today. It was said he acquiesced.

TURKS HEAR OF AN ENGAGEMENT WITH BULGARIANS

(By the United Press)

CONSTANTINOPLE—General Nazim Pasha, himself, notified the war office, it is reported here, that a great battle between Turks and Bulgarians began early today, just west of Lule Burgas. He said about 150,000 men were engaged.

Kiamil Pasha's appointment as grand vizier, succeeding Ghazi Mukhtar Pasha, who was permitted to resign, was approved in diplomatic circles here. Kiamil has long been considered Turkey's foremost statesman. He has been grand vizier several times before and his administrations have always been marked by great vigor and ability.

GREEKS REPORT SUCCESS

(By the United Press)

ATHENS—The Greeks today captured Verria, it is reported here. They were within a mile of the town yesterday. Today's despatches made no mention of a battle. Verria is an extremely important town on the Salonika-Monistir railroad, less than 50 miles from the former city.

TELLS OF ATTEMPT TO WRECK STEEL WORKS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—In the "dynamite conspiracy" trial, on Tuesday, evidence was presented showing that two packages of explosives were carried on a fast passenger train from Chicago, and that after a fuse on each package was lit, both bundles were thrown out of the train window into some steel construction work at Indiana Harbor, Ind.

John F. Byrne, a night watchman, testified that at 1 a. m., May 24, 1909, he noticed a burning fuse in the darkness. Investigating, he found the fire was reaching 14 sticks of dynamite, wrapped together in a Chicago newspaper. Unable to extinguish the fuse, he threw the dynamite into an inlet of the lake.

OPPORTUNITY

Do the duty lying nearest,
Make the most of each today.
Take the path that seems the clearest
And be up and on your way.
We shall learn to do by doing,
Practise, only, gives us skill,
And, our simple tasks pursuing,
We shall rise to nobler still.

He who makes a true beginning,
Firm of purpose and of heart,
Owns a better chance of winning
Than the one who fears to start.
Opportunity is waiting
At the door for him who will,
While the idly hesitating
Yearn for better chances still.

Step by step and hour by hour
Patient purpose gains the prize.
So the bud becomes a flower,
So do mighty cities rise.
Do the duty lying nearest,
Make the most of each today.
Take the path that seems the clearest
And be up and on your way.

The proposition to open the Panama canal a year before the San Francisco-Panama exposition is ready will savor somewhat of lifting the drop curtain before the actors have had time to compose themselves in the positions prescribed for them on the stage.

And her answer made him scorn her,
As she purred, "I, too," in accents sweet,

The western farmers who have been selling their second crop of strawberries for 35 cents a pint have found in their garden soils a gold mine yielding very valuable quart(z)s.

One of the most significant points of interest on the transportation maps of the world will be that where the yet-to-be-built Alaska-to-Cape-Horn railroad crosses the Atlantic - to - the - Pacific Panama canal.

OPTIMISM

And every tree a pen, why we
Could still believe the world all "write."

Probably Mr. Bryan is the only would-be" or "would-have-been" candidate for the presidency for whose defeat a single contributor ever gave the lump sum of $100,000. It is a distinguishing compliment.

FASHION NOTE.

In olden times "a coach and four"
Was quite the thing, but now, O ho!
A coach and 'leven suits us more,
Since football is the vogue, you know.

Secretary Knox, it is announced, will retire from public life March 4 next unless thereafter, because of conditions arising from the forthcoming election, the duties of acting President shall devolve upon him. Let's see, are there not some other public men in about the same boat?

Since it is the fourth leaf that is supposed to make the clover or the shamrock esteemed as a sign of good things to come, Sir Thomas Lipton's expressed desire to bring over the fourth Shamrock in another try for the America's cup may result in the fulfilment of the purpose he has so long entertained.

ENDS RIGHT

Of course, it isn't literature
In its true meaning, still
It's pleasant reading, that is sure,
Is a receipted bill.

Humanitarians will all agree that Great Britain's newly proposed scheme for training her soldiers to be farmers will work out better than has the world-wide, old-fashioned notion of training farmers to be soldiers.

NO NEED OF BOTH

It's costly to buy a wife diamond rings
But the husband who does it proves
That by having her wear the sparkling things
She will save a good deal on gloves.

It is rather fortunate that the latest dirigible air-vessel built for Germany, with a motive energy of 510 horsepower does not actually have to carry about the 510 equines aboard ship, with enough oats and baled hay for their upkeep.

Now that it seems to have been determined that this year's aggregate crop in the United States is to be about 20 per cent greater than it has been for years, unless the cost of living is lessened in about the same ratio, the public is going to ask somebody to rise and explain why.

WAR NOTES

Now, as Athenian youths turn out
And toward the Sultan's stronghold file,
It's pretty safe to say, no doubt,
The Turk will study Greek awhile.
And when the Turkish troops prevail
They'll raise, perchance, a loud hurrah,
But when the Greeks their forts assail
And win the day, they'll cry, "O shah!"

Amid the conditions now prevailing in southeastern Europe, perhaps it would be well to have the popular quotation, "When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war," edited and revised to the extent of writing "Turks" in place of one of the "Greeks."

PUBLIC SQUARES OF BOSTON

Winthrop square, on the southwest slope of Breeds hill—This open space was the drill-ground of patriots before the revolution and is still spoken of as the "Training Field"

In colonial times there was a level reservation on the southwest slope of Breed's hill, called the "Training Field." Here the patriot troops drilled in anticipation of the revolution. Persons long resident in Charlestown still refer to this space as the Training Field, although it has officially been known as Winthrop square since 1848. Winthrop square, with its three acres of lawn, furnishes a good setting for Martin Milmore's elaborate soldiers and sailors monument, erected in 1872. At the northerly entrance are two tablets, bearing the names of the patriots known to have been in the battle of Bunker Hill. Adams street was "staked out" by the selectmen in 1797 from Townsends corner (at Chelsea street) to Mr. Breed's horse pasture. Winthrop street was known as Training Field street until 1836, when the present name was given. Common street was long in use as a village street. It was named in 1831.

WHAT EDITORS ARE SAYING

SUBJECTS of general interest are dealt with in the editorial comments presented today.

MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL—According to a recent newspaper report, a tariff war threatens between the United States and Germany, arising over split peas, but really due to friction over the Panama canal duties. The United States has the power to lay additional duty on any German export that enjoys a bounty. The treasury department claims, and Germany denies, that German split peas enjoy practically a bounty. The diplomatic dispute having hung fire for two years, the treasury department now announces that it will impose the additional duty. German-American trade now amounts to $450,000,000 annually, this country having the advantage in the exchange of $125,000,000. The trade is important to both countries and a tariff war would be a serious matter. The United States, however, can hardly afford to have its canal policy dictated by another country, nor can it well allow a German bounty to wreck its tariff agreements with other countries. It is our duty, however, to examine carefully the canal regulations that we may be certain no pettiness has crept in.

NEW ORLEANS PICAYUNE—It is not surprising that in those sections of the country where the roads are good and conditions favorable the railroads have suffered in their passenger travel from the competition of automobiles. . . . With the improvements in country roads and in the design of motor trucks there is also growing up a competition with the railways in the handling of freight for short distances, particularly in congested terminal districts. . . . It has always been the case that every new invention which improved business facilities and increased economies trenched on and often seriously affected the methods previously in use, but they made new business and opened new fields of employment for labor, skill and intelligence. The optimistic and evidently the true view of the situation is that both the automobile and the motor truck are agencies of transportation that make for good roads and better conditions of living, which will ultimately be helpful to the railways as well as to others. The railways certainly are vitally interested in road improvement; they derive large earnings from the shipment of automobiles, and if the traveling salesman is able to sell more goods by their use the railways will surely profit as a result. At the same time it is not unlikely that the increased use of automobiles will have a tendency to slacken the building of interurban trolley lines. There is nothing in sight, and certainly not the flying machine, that can take the place of railroads, and the general extension of good roads coincident with the settling up of the country will all redound to the benefit of the railways in the end.

MONTREAL STAR—Ontario will have added 400 miles to her itinerary of "good roads" before the end of the year. During 1913 she expects to double this achievement. It has been the universal experience wherever serious efforts have been made to improve the highways that all that is necessary is to give the movement a start; once it is in operation it carries itself forward by its own impetus. Farms in counties which have given attention to scientific road-making fetch better prices than those with equally good soil located a few miles away in districts which have failed to understand what good roads really mean. . . . Quebec has started to make the highways of this province conform better to what, by general concensus of opinion, a highway should be, but it is only a start. Without confidence and enthusiasm, the task will be a heavy one to carry through. It calls for patience in the face of prejudice, tact to deal with ignorance, and an irresistible determination to press on to the end, no matter what the obstacles. There is nothing this province needs more than better roads. No province in the dominion will give better or speedier returns to money and time invested in this way. Education will do much to facilitate matters, but a persistent and continuous purpose is the essential thing.

PLOWING MATCH AT FOREST FARM A KEEN CONTEST

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—The seventh annual plowing match of the Ilford Farmers' Association was held recently at Forest farm, Barkingside, which is inside the limits of Greater London.

By 8 o'clock the competitors were each on their allotted ground and by 10 o'clock their tasks had been completed. The soil possessed exactly the right degree of moisture for the exercise of perfect skill in plowing, and the achievements of the men were acknowledged by experts to be well ahead of all previous competitions. Ilford parish, which consists of 8500 acres, supplied practically all the competitors.

The judging called for the exercise of great exactness, for to the uninitiated eye, one furrow was as perfect as another, and all the earth had been thoroughly turned over. The judges measured each furrow, however, to the hundredth part of an inch, and succeeded, after considerable deliberation, in awarding prizes to 16 men.

The first prize winners were Henry Stringer for three horse teams at length, W. Downham for pair horse teams, Charles Brand in the boys' class, J. Grubb for a special pair horse team competition and David Price in class five.

An exhibition of roots and corn was run in connection with the plowing competition when some remarkably large cabbages, parsnips and turnips were shown. One cabbage scaled over 75 pounds upon the weighing machine.

ISTHMIAN CANAL COST AND THE SEIGNIORAGE

United States Profit on 40 Years' Coinage of Silver, Nickel and Bronze Pieces Totals $205,385,272 —Four Fifths Is the Proportion

WASHINGTON—The seigniorage, or profit, which the government has secured on the coinage of silver, nickel and bronze pieces during the past 40 years, has aggregated $205,385,272, which is approximately four fifths of the cost of the isthmian canal.

The origin of these profits is not difficult to discover. Copper, from which the cent pieces are made, costs 18 cents a pound, and a pound of copper will coin 146 cents. Nickel, from which the five-cent pieces are made, costs about 34 cents a pound, and each pound will coin 90 nickels; or, in other words, the government realizes about $4.50 on an outlay of not quite 34 cents. Silver is worth from 60 to 61 cents an ounce, which yields $1.29 in money.

The net profits on silver from 1878 to 1912, 34 years, were $166,414,336, and the profit on minor coins from 1873 to 1911 was $38,970,936.

But while there has been a large profit on the coinage of silver, nickel and bronze, the coinage of gold has entailed a small loss. The exact figures of cost incident to the coinage of the different metals are not available, but the proportionate cost of the coinage of gold, as compared with the expense of the mint service, up to March, 1911, probably had not exceeded $250,000 a year.

A gold dollar contains 25.8 grains of standard gold, of which 10 per cent is copper alloy. To depositors of gold bullion the government pays $20.67 an ounce of fine gold, but makes a charge against the depositor of two cents a gold ounce for the cost of the alloy used.

The United States treasury vaults now contain gold coin and bullion to a greater value than ever before in history, and nearly double that of any other nation in the world. Gold in the treasury totaled, Aug. 23, $1,008,197,179 of coin, and nearly $213,000,000 in bullion. Of this amount $150,000,000 is being held for the redemption of United States notes and treasury notes of 1890, and $1,047,508,259 is held for the redemption of gold certificates outstanding.

There have been several changes in the denominations of coins since 1874. In that year the coinage of silver half dimes and three-cent pieces was discontinued. Since 1904 the only coins made by the government are double eagles, eagles, half eagles, and quarter eagles in gold; half dollars, quarter dollars and dimes, in silver; the five-cent piece in nickel, and the cent in bronze.

Indestructo Trunk Goes Astray

Found by Registry System in 24 Hours

Returned to Owner Without Expense to Him

Some time last month a certain man in Chicago left for Dallas, Texas, with an Indestructo trunk.

On the same day, another man passed through Chicago on his way from Kansas City to New York.

In some unexplainable manner their checks were confused by the baggage man. When the Chicago Man reached Dallas and arrived at his hotel, he found a strange trunk awaiting him.

"Indestructo Traveler"

There was no means of identifying it without breaking it open, which he did, and even then he was unable to locate the owner. In desperation he wired the Indestructo factory that he had lost his trunk; and awaited developments.

When the Kansas City man arrived in New York, he also found a strange trunk—an Indestructo—but it was not necessary to break it open in order to discover its owner.

He followed instructions on the trunk and telegraphed its number to the Registry Department of the Indestructo factory, who immediately straightened out the tangle by wire and started both trunks in their proper direction, without expense to the owner of the Indestructo.

Every Indestructo trunk is registered against loss always. You can be sure that your trunk will reach its destination safely and securely.

MAINE ELEVENS ARE TO MEET SATURDAY IN 1912 STATE SERIES

Colby Plays University of Maine at Waterville in Game Expected to Determine this Year's Title

BOWDOIN VS. BATES

MAINE STATE CHAMPIONS

1902—Maine.

BRUNSWICK, ME.—That the Maine state football championship title of 1912 will be decided Saturday when Colby meets University of Maine at Waterville, is the opinion of the followers of Bowdoin, Bates, Colby and University of Maine this fall. These two teams have each won a game in the series, Maine defeating Bates and Colby winning from Bowdoin.

The Maine team outweighs the Colby aggregation by an average of 10 pounds to the man, and is sure to play a hard game. Capt. Shepherd is acknowledged to be the best punter in the Maine colleges. Carleton, Martin and Ruffner are hard men to stop when carrying the ball; Bernheisel at end is a star in recovering punts, and the Maine team from tackle to tackle is very powerful.

Fraser and Lowney of Colby have proved themselves among the best ground gainers in the state this fall, and the interference given the man with the ball in every rush is very strong. Ayer is playing a heady game at quarter, and the line with Capt. Soule at guard is a tower of strength both on offense and defense.

At Brunswick Bates and Bowdoin meet now, apparently to fight it out for third place in the final standing, but many times in previous state championship series the final winner has been a loser in the first game and there are many in the state who still look for Bowdoin or Bates to be among the leaders.

With a week in which to perfect her defense, Bowdoin will put up a different game than last Saturday. The game with Colby was not so one-sided as the score would indicate, and until Colby's two long runs for touchdowns came in the third period the teams seemed very evenly matched. Weatherill proved his ability as a ground-gainer and one of the best all around players in the state. His run of 48 yards in the first period last Saturday in spite of the efforts of several Colby players to stop him, was equal to any one play in the game. Foster also proved a ground gainer of much ability while he was in the game, and it was principally through his charges that the Bowdoin team got within striking distance of the Colby goal line. Bowdoin was penalized only 15 yards to Colby's 110 yards, and made first down as many times as Colby. LaCasce showed that he may be counted upon as a kicker by dropping a pretty goal from the field from the 25-yard line.

Bates has a fast team this year with a number of stars in the lineup. Talbot is a sure quarterback, and in the game with Maine outpunted Shepherd. Capt. Dennis is a hard man to stop when carrying the ball and is sure in tackling. Shepherd is a lineman of much ability, and it was through his work that Bates scored her touchdown against Maine. Danahy and Thompson proved their rights to being considered for the all-Maine team at the ends by being in nearly every play to advantage.

The University of Maine and Colby have played 23 games since they met for the first time on the gridiron in 1893. Of these games Maine has won 13 and Colby 10. Maine has scored a total of 207 points to Colby's 188.

Bowdoin and Bates have played 19 games since 1889. Of these games Bowdoin has won 12 and Bates 6. One game has been a tie; Bowdoin has scored 266 points to Bates' 72.

SCRUB LINEMEN TURN OUT STARS

ITHACA—Cornell's football squad goes to work today with two new stars discovered. Two scrub linemen of great prominence were uncovered during Tuesday's practise in Colyer and Mattory, and they caused the varsity backs no end of trouble, breaking through frequently and laying the runner low. Both men were out early in the season, but were slow to get into condition. The coaches liked Mattory's work so well that they shifted him to left guard on the varsity before the game had gone very far.

The squad scrimmaged for over an hour on Alumni field Tuesday afternoon, and the varsity showed good form, beating the second team by two touchdowns, both of which were largely the result of rushes into the line. Hill and R. P. Whyte, who appeared at right halfback in the varsity lineup for the first time in two weeks, made consistent though short gains through the line. The team also was given a stiff defensive test, in which the varsity forwards held well.

ERNEST BARRY EASILY WINS RACE FROM EDWARD DURNAN

(Copyrighted Sports and General Ill. Co.)

BARRY AND DURNAN SHAKING HANDS AFTER CONTEST

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Ernest Barry, the world's and English sculling champion, has never had such an easy task as when rowing against his recent challenger, Eddie Durnan of Canada. Having a full advantage over his opponent in weight and reach, the Englishman showed his superiority in a very decisive fashion. Though the margin of victory was but two and a half lengths, Barry had the race well in hand after the mile post, and not once during the course of the 22½ minutes was he called upon to quicken. Durnan's stroke was considerably faster than that of his opponent, but in spite of this he was easily outplaced, though he rowed 30 to Barry's 26 strokes in the minute for a considerable distance. The champion's long and steady swing carried him easily through the water, his style being, as usual, exceedingly graceful. Towards the close of the race Durnan continued to strike faster and, with 26 to Barry's 20, drew up considerably—having been 8 or 10 lengths astern at Barnes bridge, but the champion had plenty in hand and held the Canadian off with ease.

The course and times were as follows (the times being those of the winner):

Putney to mile post	4m. 58s.
Putney to Hammersmith	1ml. 6½fur. 8m. 32s.
Putney to Chiswick Church	2ml. 5½fur. 13m. 40s.
Putney to Barnes bridge	3ml. 5 fur. 18m. 43s.
Putney to the ship, Mortlake	4ml. 2 fur. 22m. 31s.

By his victory over Durnan, Barry becomes entitled to retain the sportsman cup (which is associated with the championship of England) as his own property. This he has done by securing three victories within two consecutive years, viz., over Fogwell, Albany and Durnan, representatives of New Zealand, England and Canada respectively.

Barry's boat measurements were: Length 27 feet, rigger spread 4 feet 9 inches, depth (center) 6 inches, while those of Durnan were very similar except that the latter rowed in a shell 2 feet shorter than that of his opponent.

During the same afternoon as the championship was rowed, a lightweight sculling match was decided between G. H. Gobbett of Greenwich and G. D. Cordery of Putney, two promising young scullers. The course was the usual Putney to Mortlake, and the Greenwich man won easily in the very creditable time of 23m. 12s. It is now confidently expected that Barry will receive a definite challenge from one of the Australian aspirants before long. Such a race will be a popular attraction next spring or summer.

NEW RECORDS ARE MADE AT SALEM

SALEM, N. H.—Three new track records were made in the free automobile races at Rockingham park Tuesday afternoon. A crowd of 3000 watched the five events, in which the best drivers of the East participated, and Harry Grant, Jack le Cain and Harry Cobe, the stars of the meet, were given unstinted applause for their driving.

The meeting was held under the auspices of a committee of Boston and Lowell dealers, and the conditions were excellent for racing. Grant won two first prizes in his Stutz, Cobe won the Rockingham park trophy in his Jackson, and Le Cain, in a Stutz, won the 25-mile professional race.

The race by Grant, Le Cain and Charles Basle was the feature event of the day, and was won by Grant by an eighth of a mile. He took the lead at the start and was never headed and made a new track record by completing the mile course in 57 2-5s.

In the 25-mile professional race Cobe held the lead for two miles, and then Le Cain went to the front. At 10 miles Grant made his bid, but could not get by Cobe, who won second place by 20 yards. George W. Downes lowered the amateur mile record, covering the distance in 1m. 5s.

YALE REGULARS PRACTISE UNDER EX-CAPT. SHEVLIN

Hard Scrimmaging Marks Today's Work—Renewed Confidence in Team—Two of Last Year's Men Back

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Hard scrimmaging marks today's practise for the Yale gridiron squad. All the regulars scrimmage under the direction of former Capt. Thomas Shevlin, who has just arrived from Minneapolis.

There is a renewed confidence that by the time of the Princeton game Yale will have rounded into more than championship form. This is due in a measure to the fact that the quarterback position has been practically settled, Wheeler being the man selected. Much of the play is being built around Flynn and the defense is getting lots of good points from the old players who came back this week.

Two players of the Yale eleven of last year who have been missing from the ranks this fall, reported Tuesday and promised to become available for the Brown, Princeton and Harvard matches that close the campaign. They are Thomas St. Germaine and David Dunn. St. Germaine is the former University of Minnesota guard who was used in several games last fall. He gave promise of proving the only Indian to win his "Y" at Yale and this year he is likely to perform the feat. He was used at guard.

Dunn was the regular fullback last season and was one of the most formidable line breakers in any eastern backfield. Both St. Germaine and he have been handicapped by faculty restrictions this fall.

A 30-minute session was played against the scrubs Tuesday behind closed gates. Only one first down was made during the afternoon by the scrubs, who were compelled to punt the third down when the varsity, taking the ball about their 40-yard line, twice carried it for touchdowns without being held. The lineup:

Carter and Osborn, le.; Pendleton, lt.; Madden, lg.; Read, c.; Arnold, rg.; H. Warren, rt.; Gile, re.; Wheeler, q.; Philbin, lh.; Captain Spalding, rh.; Pumpelly, f.

BASEBALL PICKUPS

Apropos of the scheme of August Herrmann for a series of interleague games, a number of fans about Boston advocate a pre-season series between the two local organizations next spring.

—ooo—

George Stallings, the new manager of the Boston National League team, is now on his estate at Haddock, Ga. It is one of the largest and most magnificent cotton plantations in that state. It would take a horse back rider two days, it is said, to se the place thoroughly. Mr. Stallings' manager is an old Boston first baseman, Sharpe. The place is near Athens, where the team once trained and it is said that Mr. Stallings easily could establish training quarters for the team on his own estate if he desired to do so.

HARVARD TO TRY NEW PLAYS FOR PRINCETON GAME

Hard Scrimmages Carded for Today and Tomorrow—Big Mass Meeting Planned for Tonight

Scrimmage work of the hardest kind is expected for the Harvard varsity eleven this afternoon. Today and tomorrow are the only days left in which the coaches will be able to drive the men hard and while the condition of the eleven is now quite satisfactory to Coach Haughton there are several new plays which he wants to work up that will take considerable time and hard work.

In addition to the practise today the first mass meeting of the year will be held in the Union this evening. Captain Wendell and J. W. Farley '02 are expected to address the students and Coach Haughton will probably be called upon for a few words. Songs for the Princeton game will be rehearsed and it is hoped that the Crimson will make more of a feature of this than heretofore.

Captain Wendell did not have any active practise Tuesday. He was out on the field, but kept to the side lines. The other men who have been resting since the Brown game were in at their regular places. After a long blackboard talk in the locker building, the varsity team worked out some of the plays which had just been shown them in the stadium inclosure. Later the second team came in and repeated Monday's performance of trying Princeton-styled plays on the varsity line. No consistent attempt was made to advance the ball, the coaches' policy apparently being to give the men comparatively light work in the early part of the week and drive through some hard scrimmage today and tomorrow, when they have mastered the details of the plays in lighter signal drill.

Felton, Harwick and Bradlee had their daily round of punting practise and reeled off some good long ones. Just how well the crimson will be able to adapt its style of play to meet that of the Princeton eleven to best advantage can at present be judged only by the success which they had in particularizing their power to meet just the things which Brown had to offer. The team is in fine shape, and by the time they have gone through the work laid out for today the plays are sure to be coming through with greater smoothness and power. The lineup of the varsity team in Tuesday's practise was as follows:

PRINCETON HAS HARD PRACTISE IN HARVARD PLAY

PRINCETON, N. J.—Head Coach Cunningham will put the candidates for the Princeton varsity football team through a strenuous secret scrimmage this afternoon with the second eleven trying out the Harvard formations on the varsity. That there are many rough edges yet to be smoothed over before the Harvard game is admitted and much attention will be given to individual coaching. The forwards are giving the coaches the most concern as they are pretty well satisfied with the work of the backfield.

Assistant Coach McClave seemed pleased with the snap of the scrimmage Tuesday. DeWitt confined himself to an almost continuous punting fest. Some of his kicks went 50 and 55 yards, and all of them were gotten off quickly. Herring's secretly coached scrub eleven faced the varsity in the scrimmage work for almost an hour.

The play seesawed back and forth, with most of the formation confined to mass play, but toward the close Waller got the ball on a skin tackle play at the scrub 30-yard line and wormed his way through the secondary defense by a magnificent buck that saved the day for the varsity, but completely demolished the seconds. The scrub backfield through the efforts of Boland, Hammond and Harlow, made several first downs on the varsity, many of them on deceiving plays that could only puzzle the first string once.

VERMONT GIVES ATHLETES CUPS

BURLINGTON, Vt.—University of Vermont and city of Burlington gave R. W. Collins and W. L. Gardner of the Boston Americans and A. L. Gutterson, the track athlete, a royal welcome Tuesday night. The celebration started in the gymnasium. The three athletes spoke briefly, going back to college days. Headed by a college band 300 students marched down hill to the banquet at Hotel Vermont, where 500 covers were laid.

The Governor was unable to be present, but his place was taken by Lieutenant-Governor Howe. President Benton on behalf of the university and city presented Gardner, Collins and Gutterson with loving cups. Mayor Roberts, as toastmaster, introduced the speakers.

Lieutenant-Governor Howe was the first speaker. Speaker Plumley, although a graduate of Norwich, said he was as proud of Vermont's athletes as was any man of the University of Vermont. The Hon. J. A. Deboer of Montpelier told of his experience both reporting and playing baseball.

T. H. Murnane gave his hearers much pleasure with his stories of the game. Congressman Frank Greene responded to the call of the toastmaster.

TINKER AGREES TO MANAGE THE CINCINNATI CLUB

All That Is Now Needed to Complete Deal Is Securing of His Release From Chicago Team

CHICAGO—Shortstop J. B. Tinker of the Chicago National league baseball team and A. G. Herrmann, owner of the Cincinnati team in the same league, have agreed upon terms under which Tinker will manage the latter club next season if he can obtain his release from Chicago. Both Tinker and Herrmann have confirmed the announcement and expressed hope that President Murphy of the Chicago club will release the shortstop. No details of the agreement have been given out.

President Murphy has given no indication of what course he would follow.

Tinker announced Tuesday that he would not play again with the Chicago Nationals. "I can't play the same kind of ball under Evers that I did under Chance," said Tinker. After a long conference with Herrmann the shortstop said that Herrmann was prepared to trade several players for him. "He will give one infielder and two outfielders for me," said Tinker. "No pitchers are to be included in the deal. I told Mr. Herrmann that I did not want the Cincinnati club weakened. After our talk he decided that he would give Grant for me or that Evers might have two of the following four outfielders: Mitchell, Kinsley, Bates or Kyle.

"Evers says he will not consent to a trade unless he can get Mike Doolan of Philadelphia for a shortstop. That is unjust to me, as there are Cincinnati players available who would make up a good infield.

COACHES PLAN TO DEVOTE TIME TO LINE BETTERMENT

HANOVER, N. H.—Beginning today the Dartmouth football coaches will devote practically all their time to the improvement of the line, drilling it for speed and defense. One thing can be stated definitely, there will be changes in the line before the Harvard game and probably as soon as next Saturday, when the Green meets Amherst.

It looks as if both Estep and Whitmore would have to show improvement to hold their positions. Gibson will probably be shifted from guard to center on the offence, while the competition for the position made vacant will be among Whitmore, Beer, Dunbar, Hickox and Hinman. If necesary the coaches are willing to sacrifice heavy men for light men with more speed and a harder charge.

Coach Cavanaugh gave the squad one of the longest and hardest scrimmages it has had this season Tuesday. Before starting in with the real work of the afternoon, however, he took an hour off to point out the mistakes made in Saturday's game. Most of Tuesday afternoon's session was spent in drilling the backs on short, quick starts. The coaches recognize the fact that the line has lacked speed all the fall, and it was well known to them that it would not play fast ball at this stage of the season. They are confident that the men are now coming along all right and that by the time of the final game there will be radical improvement along this line.

Whitney, Morey and Barenda will be back into the lineup for Saturday's game, it is believed. The lineup:

ANDOVER SOCCER PROSPECTS GOOD

ANDOVER, Mass.—Andover's soccer team seems likely to make another fine showing this year. Last season Andover won all its games but two. Practise has been going along steadily ever since school opened. Next Saturday there will come the more interesting stage of regular games, with Brookline Gymnasium as the first team to line up against the academy squad. Both the Yale and Harvard varsity are included in the schedule. The schedule:

Nov. 2, Brookline Gym. at Andover; 6, open; 13, Harvard varsity, at Andover; 16, Harvard freshmen, at Cambridge; 10, open; 23, Middlesex school, at Concord; 30, Yale varsity, at Andover.

Dec. 4, open; 7, Worcester Academy, at Andover.

Mr. Yamada is the only foreigner in the tournament. He is 24 years old and has been playing billiards only five years, but his performances have been excellent.

MURPHY AND FOGEL MEET

PHILADELPHIA—C. W. Murphy is here to see Horace Fogel this afternoon. The reason assigned for Murphy's visit to Philadelphia is that he must get another shortstop to take the place of Tinker. Murphy has given August Herrmann and Tinker permission to dicker with each other.

HOCKEY BOARD TO LOOK AFTER GAME IN BOSTON

Propose to Have Committee Made up of Representatives of Leading Clubs to Improve the Sport

Plans are now proposed which if perfected will give Boston a "hockey commission," made up of representatives of the leading hockey clubs in and around the city.

Prominent sporting and business men of Boston wish to have hockey in this city conducted on a basis that will guarantee good matches, the appearance of first-class teams and the game improved in general. At a recent meeting at the offices of the Boston Arena, many men prominent in hockey hereabouts were present, and though no actual work was done, much was outlined and places left on a committee which will look after the ice game for representatives of any other club in Greater Boston that wishes to have officers look after their interests.

Among those present at the meeting were Dr. E. F. Murphy, A. R. Shaw, William Carlton, B. J. Woods, J. W. Norfolk, J. W. Eadie, E. L. Gibbs, W. M. Lougee, F. A. Haines, D. E. Doody, Arthur L. Johnson, Herman Rank and W. S. Cannell. George V. Brown and Charles Carter of the B. A. A. signified their willingness to attend the meeting, but business of the Boston A. A. claimed their attention at the time.

The men elected to this proposed committee will be only those who know the game from start to finish and in whom the players and public have confidence. The committee, as it is planned, will abide by the rules of the International Skating Association, which is affiliated with the A. A. U., and will settle all matters of dispute over referees, umpires, time and periods and eligible players among the clubs of Greater Boston.

HARVARD CROSS COUNTRY PICKED

Harvard's 10 cross-country runners who are to go to Ithaca Saturday to race the Cornell team over a 5½ mile course were finally chosen Tuesday afternoon after time trials were held over the full six miles length of the Chestnut Hill course.

BICYCLISTS TO RACE HERE FOR TITLE OF WORLD IN SPRINTS

Matches to be Held Friday and Saturday Nights in Connection with Six-Day Contest, Starting Monday

BEST OF MANY LANDS

For the first time the worldd's championship bicycle sprint races will be decided in Boston. They are to take place Friday and Saturday of this week in connection with the six-day bicycle race which starts at the Boston Arena Monday at 1 p. m.

Friday night's sprint program has had to be rearranged completely because of the withdrawal of Alfred Grenda, the Australian champion. Grenda was scheduled to meet Frank Kramer, the title holder, Andre Perchicot, the French champion and Gardellini of Italy in a match race. Jack Clarke of Australia has been substituted for Grenda and Joseph Fogler of Brooklyn is to take Kramer's place. The world's champion will then meet the winner of Friday's match in a special mile best two out of three heats match Saturday night.

There will be a moter paced race of 10 miles also on Friday night, with Moran, Karmon and Walthour as the contestants. Beside these events there will be amateur and professional sprint races.

The winner of the motor paced race will meet Collins of Lynn and George Wiley of Syracuse, the present world's champion, behind a motor pacer. Again there will be amateur and professional sprint contests.

The big event, the six day race, will start at 1 o'clock Monday afternoon with 14 teams of two men each entered. Already there has been much interest evidenced and an unusually large attendance is expected at the Arena.

Men are busy today upon the construction of the wooden track upon which the bicyclists will race. This work started yesterday and probably will be completed by tomorrow night, although the finishing touches may not be put on until Friday morning.

AMUSEMENTS AND FESTAS ADD COLOR TO LIFE OF ITALIAN WORKMAN

On Traditional Holidays, Which Atone for Long Saturdays, Fountains Play, Flags Fly, Bands are Merry and Every One Enjoys the Sunny Street or Cafe

MUSIC IS ONE OF LABORER'S DELIGHTS

The following tenth article of the special series descriptive of the work and play of the "Working Man in Europe," shows the lighter side of the Italian worker's life.

(Special to the Monitor)

ROME — Amusements and "festas" play no inconsiderable a part in life of the Italian workman, although these are generally of a very simple and inexpensive character, showing a resemblance to those of the immortal "Mrs. Gilpin" who, "though on pleasure she was bent, yet had a frugal mind." These amusements all lie outside the circle of his own home, for the Italian is a gregarious being, loving the streets and squares of his native town or village, the cafes, clubs and public walks, and it is to these that he turns for diversion on his holidays or when his day's work is done.

The custom of the weekly half-holiday, common in England and other countries, does not exist in Italy, works being open until evening upon Saturday as on other days; and although the recent regulations as to a weekly day of rest have closed most of the shops and workrooms on Sunday morning, and al' by middle-day, the independent workman, the carpenter or printer, is very likely to slip into his workshop and put in a few hours' work on a Sunday morning although he cannot oblige, or even allow, his employees to do the same. But what the Italian workman loses in weekly half-holidays he makes up in the large number of whole holidays which are scattered over the 12 months, and which, although the modern government has suppressed many of the saints' days, which used to be observed as public holidays, yet total up a considerable number throughout the year. Then there are the civic holidays, such as May 1, June 15, April 27, Sept. 20, so that between those which are commanded, by either church or state, the Italian workman is well compensated for his usual six days' work.

Holidays Picturesque

Generally speaking, the recently established government holidays are lacking in color and character, and certainly in picturesqueness, although the fountains play, the flags fly, and the bands perform in the public squares. It is the old traditional holidays, the local religious festivals, which really stir up the people, and these are the days when a genuine spirit of gaiety and enjoyment seems to reign.

Then, and especially if the sun shines, the whole population seems to turn out into the streets and piazzas, and the little marble-topped tables of the cafes extend far across the sidewalks and out into the square. And it is at these little tables that the workman, having donned his best clothes, and visited the barber, for no Italian shaves himself, loves to sit on Sundays and holidays, and on hot summer nights, when, after joining in the "passeggiata," and parading the streets or public gardens with his whole family dressed in their best, watching the fashionable world drive by, he retires to a cafe, humble or fashionable in proportion to his means, and there will sit for hours over an ice or cup of coffee, criticizing the passers-by and listening to the band.

Fun Is Plentiful

His whole family, even to the smallest child, accompanies him, for Italians are very good to their children, and never exclude them from the treats. The little servant, too, if there is one, has her place at the table, and her share of the fun. And of fun there generally is plenty, in watching the gay moving crowd in its best clothes, and amazingly good clothes they usually are; for the wife of even a very modest workman will turn herself and her children out in much style and splendor for the "passeggiata," though it must be admitted that this end seems only attained by incredible slatternliness at home, as all the good clothes are saved to "far figura" or make an effect on holidays.

So seated, watching the gay world go by, meeting his friends, eating his ice, buying an air balloon or flag, or jumping-jack for his baby from one of the many hawkers who are in evidence on such occasions, the Italian workman is at peace and happy.

He loves gaiety, movement, and "festas;" he likes waving flags and sparkling fountains, and music; and especially the fireworks and illuminations with which any important holiday is sure to end, and his taste is pretty well catered for during the long succession of civil and religious fetes throughout the year. But besides all this, if the festival be a religious one, it is very likely that he himself, as a good citizen, has some public part to play; a part which, in spite of socialism, of modern doubts, and modern thought, he will play with a serenity and dignity which seems to bring a flavor of the medieval into these modern and progressive days.

"Dressing Up" Enjoyed

The simple pleasure of "dressing up," in processions, shows, and pageants, which is so salient a characteristic of the Italian, manifests itself also in the plays, known as the "Maggi," which are organized and acted by the workmen and peasants, especially in the mountain districts, and it also accounts for the love of the theater and the cinematograph, and the passion, especially in the south, for marionettes, the performances of which will follow nightly, for months, the successive events in some well known story, such as the "Round Table," the "Iliad," or the "Reali di Francia," Tasso's "Gerusalemme," or Ariosto's "Orlando," the audience paying a monthly subscription which privileges them to witness a performance each evening, and costs them about a penny a head each night.

But besides all these greater excitements the workman has his smaller, quieter amusements. There are the popular "recreation clubs," alike in cities and villages, although, whereas in the cities, where they abound, they specialize to a certain extent in different trades, one being chiefly supported by the jewelers, and another by the printers and bookbinders, yet in a village there will probably be but two, one for the well-to-do shopkeepers and mechanics, and another for the poorer laborers and commoner class of working men. Here dances and reunions are at times organized and each evening there is card playing and newspaper reading and talk.

Games Not Popular

The Italian workman is not much addicted to games or sport. Almost the only game requiring any physical exertion which is popular with him being bowls, which he plays on Sundays along the country roads. He goes sometimes to look on at a game of "pallone;" but this "big ball" game is played by professionals, and he has no share in the play himself. He is often fond of fishing, and in Florence, during the hot months, rows of workmen may be seen at 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning seated along the parapet of the Arno angling for the few small fish which the river yields. He also, at such seasons, bathes in the river, and rows upon it in the cool of the day.

The Italian is very fond of music, and one of the workman's delights is to play in the band which it is the ambition of every village to possess, and whose duty it is to perform, on holidays, in the public square. He is also fond of wandering about the streets on summer nights with a group of companions, singing to a mandoline, though this, it need hardly be said, he usually does only in his youthful days.

In summer every one who can possibly do so makes an effort to visit the "Bagni di mare" for sea bathing, or at least to spend some time in the country, and well-to-do workmen often board their wives and children with relations or friends in the country for the hot months, going themselves from Saturday till Monday every week.

OF JOHN DAVENPORT'S WRITINGS

Selections Illuminate Character of Interesting New Haven Puritan—Paper IV. on Connecticut and Rhode Island Group, Early Literature Series

Writings of the Rev. John Davenport, from which extracts are quoted in the accompanying article, show him to have been a man of unusual breadth of view among the early New England settlers. They also indicate that he had deep and practical religious faith and exceptional facility in voicing that faith simply and beautifully for the good of others. It was his grandson, Col. Abraham Davenport, whose concept and example of duty Whittier celebrates in "The Tent on the Beach." This is the fourth paper on the Connecticut and Rhode Island group, in the plantation period, in the series on early American literature.

INDIANS about New Haven, seeing the diligent literary habits of the Rev. John Davenport, called him "the so big study man." Even to enumerate all the writings that proceeded from his pen would be a tedious task, and an acquaintance with him as an author is best served in considering a few of the more distinctively significant as examples; those of his works most intimately connected with New Haven history having been already noted.

His earliest publication, while he was a clergyman in London, was a sermon called "A Royal Ediet for Military Exercises" which came out in 1629. It had been preached to "the captains and gentlemen that exercise arms in the Artillery Garden, at their general meetting." This company was the one upon which the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston was founded, and the direct ancestors of the company in London which recently so handsomely entertained its American offspring. A copy of the pamphlet is in the Athenaeum library.

Early Book Titles

While in Amsterdam, Davenport issued several books and tracts mostly concerned with the "corrupt doctrine" of his colleague, the Rev. John Paget; so that when, in 1646, he was deputed to reply to Mr. Paget in the name of the New England churches, he was upon familiar ground. His book, as then written, named—"The Power of Congregational Churches Asserted"—disappeared with the ship which did not return to its New Haven port, and was not rewritten and published until 1672.

Another book, "The Knowledge of Christ" (London, 1653), is an exhaustive commentary on the subject of the Messiahship, which bears out convincingly what is related of his marvelous acquaintance with the Bible as a storehouse of weapons for argument, and of the writings of the early fathers, with whose original Latin and Greek he garnished his margins. This book is dated, "From my Study in New Haven in New England the tenth day of the eighth Moneth called October, 1652."

More attractive than all is a little book called "The Saint's Anchor-Hold in all Storms and Tempests;" being the gist of "sundry sermons," and "published for the Support and Comfort of God's People in all times of Tryal." This volume bears date of 1661. The whole treatise is based on the words in Lamentations (iii. 24)—"The Lord is my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him."

From its rich pages are culled the following unconsecutive passages:

Brief Excerpts

"Take heed of placing your comfort too much in the creature, which being subject to change and inconstancy, will be apt to breed disquietment. Vexation inseparably follows vanity when vanity is not apprehended to be where it is. In what degree any are lifted up, in expectation of satisfying good from creatures or overjoyed with the comforts of them, in that degree they are dis-appointed of their hope and distressed in the loss of creature contentments. . . . Hence arise these bitter complaints; I had setled my contentment and my hope in such a friend, or relation, but now they are gone, and with them all my joy is gone. . . .

"Therefore Agur prayed wisely in Prov. 30: 8. Remove far from me vanity and lies, i. e. vain and false apprehensions, whereby the affections are too strongly fixed upon things that are vain and lying, promising that contentment which they cannot yield; confidence in vanities makes them idols; and makes the heart vaine, like the things it relyes upon, Psal. 115: 8. . . . The best remedy against this is by dweiling in the secret of the most High, to abide under the shadow of the Almighty, Psal. 91: 1, 2.

"The Lord is my portion. A part or portion is not to be taken here in the mathematical or common use of that word, as denoting a part of a whole as it frequently is in Scripture, when that part of an estate, which parents give their children, is called their portion, Gen. 31: 14, and that part of the spoil, which is the souldiers share, is called their portion, Gen. 14: 24, and that dimension of food which is allowed to any is called their portion, Deut. 18: 8, and the almes given to the poor is called their portion, Eccl. 11: 2.

"For God is not parted and divided among his people, so as one hath one part of him, another, another part of God; but every one hath whole God wholly; as the whole sun shines to every one, in which respect God is called a Sun, Psal. 24: 11. Therefore God is said to be his peoples portion, not in a comparitive sense, but in an absolute sense. God himselfe is theirs, a suitable and all sufficient good to them.

"The holy Penman of the epistle to the Hebrews, in Heb. 3: 6, compares the church of God to an house, saying, Whose house we are, if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of hope firme to the end. As it is in the building of a house, so it must be in the building of this hope. . . . 1. A strong foundation must be well laid. 2. Our hope must be strongly built upon it. 3. We must be careful that our hope be continually kept in due repair.

Look to God, Not to Men

"God himselfe, as he makes himselfe and his will known unto us by his written Word is the only suitable object; and strong foundation or ground work of this hope. . . . For in him alone are the properties of that object, on which true hope must rely. A man can be in no condition wherein he needs help, but there is in God power and will to supply it unto him. . . . The principle of being is God himselfe. . . . But that his people may thus hope in him with strong encouragement, He gives us his Word, that thereby we may know his good thoughts and purposes toward us, which is a sufficient ground of hope, it being the Word of him that cannot lie.

"Having such a strong foundation well laid, . . . build strongly upon it. . . . See that you trust and hope in God by light and strength received from himselfe. By divine light, not by mere human reason. For none can know God in his truth and goodness, but by his own light revealing himself . . . by his Word and Spirit.

"When you can say with David, The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and of my cup, Psal. 16:5, you may comfortably adde, as he did in ver. 6, The lines are fallen upon me in pleasant places. I have a goodly heritage."

In this book Mr. Davenport includes an account of the state of the Protestant churches in Europe, pressing this news upon his readers as matter of individual concern, as if he might have said in modern phrase, "Do not think in terms of New England, but in terms of the world"; an unusually broad view for his time and locality. His concluding sentence on this point is golden: "True waiting is not a mere staying God's leisure, but a continuing in a gracious, inoffensive course till the good waited for be attained."

Election Sermon Prized

An election sermon of 1669 is one of the most highly prized of his works. New England historians refer to this sermon as famous, but none appear to have seen the printed pamphlet until, in 1903, a copy was found in the collection of a Pennsylvanian antiquarian. After an intervening change of owners it became the property of the Boston public library for the sum of $250. In it occurs a passage which shows Davenport's part in the foundation of the Massachusetts Bay colony:

"I shall conclude, with a brief reminding you of the first beginning of this colony of the Massachusetts, which I have the better advantage and more special engagement to do, being one of them by whom the Patent which you enjoy was procured, and to whom it was committed by King Charles the first, and His Majestie's most Honourable Privy Council. My name was not mentioned in the Patent because I desired it might be left out, lest the then Bishop of London, who was of the Privy Council, should have an ill eye upon me for my appearing so far in that work, whereunto he was opposite: but in expences for any Helps to promove the Work, in the first beginnings of it, I bore my part merely for the service of Christ, and for the help of His People, I not knowing that ever I should remove into these parts, by vertue of this Patent."

His other writings include a series of letters to Governor Winthrop, a catechism, and many sermons.

Face Unpuritanic

Davenport's portrait, in the possession of Yale College, shows a round, singularly childlike face, with unpuritanic kinks in the hair escaping around the edges of a skull cap. But the eyes are luminous and the lips pursed, as if he were defending his colony from aggression and false doctrine. His voice is said to have been eloquent and his presence commanding.

The Davenport name has had most honorable continuance in the annals of Connecticut. Among the descendants was Col. Abraham Davenport, who represented Stamford in the Legislature of 1780, and who made so noble a figure on that "dark day" of May, when, thinking that perhaps the day of judgment had arrived, it was proposed that the legislative council adjourn, as the House of Representatives had already done. When Colonel Davenport was asked for his opinion he rose and said:

"I am against an adjournment. The day of judgment is either approaching, or it is not. If it is not, there is no cause for adjournment. If it is, I choose to be found doing my duty. I wish therefore that candles may be brought."

Whittier, in "The Tent on the Beach," has made fine use of this incident, concluding:

"And there he stands, in memory, to this day,
Erect, self-poised, a rugged face half-seen
Against the background of unnatural dark,
A witness to the ages as they pass,
That simple duty hath no place for fear."

A worthy great-grandson—this Abraham Davenport—of one who was said, by those close about him, to have tried all doubtful questions with the touchstone, "Doth God require it?"

WHAT PLATFORMS SAY ON HEALTH LAWS

REPUBLICAN

The Republican party is now, as always, a party of advanced and constructive statesmanship. It is prepared to go forward with the solution of these new questions, which social, economic, and political development have brought into the forefront of the nation's interest. It will strive not only in the nation, but in the several states, to enact the necessary legislation to safeguard the public health, to limit effectively the labor of women and children and to protect the wage earners engaged in dangerous occupations, to enact comprehensive and generous workman's compensation laws in place of the present wasteful and unjust system of employer's liability; and in all possible ways to satisfy the just demand of the people for the study and solution of the complex and constantly changing problems of social welfare.

DEMOCRATIC

We reaffirm our previous declarations advocating the union and strengthening of the various governmental agencies relating to pure foods, quarantine, vital statistics and human health. Thus united and administered without partiality to or discrimination against any school of medicine or system of healing, they would constitute a single health service, not subordinated to any commercial or financial interests, but devoted exclusively to the conservation of human life and efficiency. Moreover, this health service should cooperate with the health agencies of our various states and cities, without interference with their prerogatives or with the freedom of individuals to employ such medical or hygienic aid as they may see fit.

PROGRESSIVE

We favor the union of all the existing agencies of the federal government dealing with the public health into a single national health service, without discrimination against or for any one set of therapeutic methods, school of medicine or school of healing, with such additional powers as may be necessary to enable it to perform efficiently such duties in the protection of the public from preventable disease as may be properly undertaken by the federal authorities, including the executing of existing laws regarding pure food, quarantine and cognate subjects, the promotion of appropriate action for the improvement of vital statistics and the extension of the registration area of such statistics, and cooperation with the health activities of the various states and cities of the nation.

Women's New Distinctive Neckwear at a Wide Range of Prices

In the Great Section Devoted to this Important Accessory of Women's Wear

It is a stranger truly who has to be directed to our far-famed Neckwear section, on the first floor of the Main Store. Our reputation for dainty and becoming Neckwear, moderately priced, is firmly established, whether for a twenty-five cent collar of novel design or one with deft touches that proclaim its French origin.

The women of New England look to us constantly for the absolutely new as well as the practical things in Neckwear. We supply them by sending our buyers to Europe, by keeping in close touch with foreign makers, and by having a watchful eye on all that is smart and dainty in domestic design.

This fall season is no exception to the general rule. Rather have we surpassed all records in our showing of fascinating, fluffy, dressy, neck accessories so dear to the hearts of women.

Recently the space given to pleatings was enlarged to twice its original size, so great is the demand for this graceful finish for the neck and sleeves and for the making of fichus, jabots and the like.

Pleatings of Shadow laces in the smart Van Dyke effect, in various widths and designs, white, cream, ecru and black, 25 cents to 2.00 a yard.

——New importations arriving every day, including the smart Richelieu and Robespierre collars in combinations of hand embroidery, Irish, Cluny, Filet or Bohemian laces. High or flat collar effects.
——New Bertha effects in Shadow laces.
——New collars in deep front and back styles.

DR. CADY TAKES UP PRISON REFORMS

That Charlestown prison should be abandoned and a new building be constructed in the country, to be conducted on reformatory, instead of penal principles, is the substance of a plea for prison reform which the Rev. The need of this work is emphasized by Warren F. Spaulding, secretary of the Massachusetts Prison Association, who declares that "Massachusetts has no prison system."

FREIGHT BELT AND TUNNEL RAILROAD PLAN IS DISCLOSED

Direct through connection between the railroads to the north and those to the south of Boston by tunnel under the harbor serving the industrial sections in South Boston, Dorchester, East Boston, Chelsea, Everett and Malden and the steamship terminals, thereby constituting a belt line and materially reducing or eliminating the present high expense of transfer, switch or terminal charges is planned at a cost of $50,000,000 by William S. McNary, chairman of the Massachusetts harbor and land commission and ex-officio member of the directors of the port.

Preparations for the development of the industrial area in East Boston by the East Boston Terminal railroad are shown on plans presented to the railroad commission giving a layout of proposed track facilities. The latter include connections between the proposed factories and the railroads.

The proposed route of the terminal railroad is from Addison street, adjoining the Boston & Maine tracks and near the Maverick mills, thence parallel to the Boston & Maine tracks to the lower end of Orient Heights, where a turn will be made in a southeasterly direction across the Winthrop branch of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad and Saratoga street, each at separate grade, to Wood Island park, then parallel to the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn railroad tracks to the Commonwealth flats on the harbor front.

Mr. McNary Outlines Plans

Mr. McNary has submitted his development plans to the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the railroads and the port directors. He appeared yesterday before a committee of the chamber comprised of W. C. Brewer, chairman of the committee on maritime affairs; John Lowell, chairman of the committee on transportation; J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., vice-president of the chamber; W. Rodman Peabody and Charles T. Main.

"The primary object of the tunnel," says Mr. McNary, "is to do away with, or cut down materially, the present great expense of transfer between such terminals and provide for a speedy and efficient handling of freight and passengers by avoiding, removing or greatly reducing the switching or terminal charges. That would remove one of the main obstacles to the development of Boston as a port.

"The secondary purpose, and almost as important as the first, would be the use of the tunnel as a feeder for industrial establishments by means of side tracks in South Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury, East Boston, Chelsea, Everett and Malden.

Tunnel a Necessity

Of the proposed tunnel connecting the South and North stations, Mr. McNary asserted that such a connection, with all the work attendant upon it, would cost $100,000,000 and would be used almost solely for passenger service. Consequently the railroad should pay for it.

Mr. McNary's plans are elaborate. They propose a freight tunnel with one portal at Clarendon street and Columbus avenue for New Haven and Boston & Albany trains from the west; two portals by Southampton street for New Haven trains from the South; two portals by the Boston & Maine yards near the Somerville, Cambridge and Charlestown lines for Boston & Maine trains from the north.

From the Boston & Maine yards the tunnel would pass through Charlestown, Everett and Chelsea. There is a portal at Breed's island, but the main tunnel passes under the harbor from East Boston.

It enters South Boston under the Commonwealth pier and proceeds to a point beneath D and Bullock streets. At that place the tunnel diverges, one of the tubes proceeding southerly to the portals on Southampton street, and the other to the portal at Columbus avenue and Clarendon street.

The tunnel also provides for the carrying of water pipes. Mr. McNary told the Chamber of Commerce committee that one of the drawbacks to Boston was the cost of water for industrial and commercial purposes. He said that pumping stations could be established and water taken from the Charles and Neponset rivers, and other sources and distributed by pipes running through the tunnel to East and South Boston.

DREDGES TO BEGIN WORK ON NEPONSET RIVER IMPROVEMENT

Actual dredging of the Neponset river through the Miltons, Norwood, Canton, Dedham and other towns along that stream, will begin in a short time, as soon as the machinery now loading is landed on the scene.

The work is being carried on by the Barge Canal Construction Company of New York, which recently secured the contract in competition with a Boston firm at a bid of approximately $115,000. The contract calls for the completion of the channel by the fall of 1914.

The first spot to be worked will be in the vicinity of Paul's bridge. Dredging there will continue until winter sets in, when work will stop until spring. It is expected that work will be commenced this fall on the removal of rock below Glenwood avenue and below Harlow's mill yard in Milton.

The plans to be carried out provide for a channel which will carry off flood waters after April 1 of every year, without flooding the meadows or banks, below Paul's bridge, furnishing as great a depth of water at as high a velocity as is necessary during periods of dry weather to prevent the growth of weeds on the bottom of the new channel.

The state board of health has informed the people of the various towns that while the work of deepening and rectifying the channel is progressing, the board will use every means within its power to compel the mills, factories and tanneries on the Neponset river and its tributaries to stop the letting of untreated mill and factory wastes into them, and the progress so far indicates that by the time the dredging of the river is completed the stream will not be in the condition as in the past and at the present time.

With the money thus far appropriated for the work, dredging will start at the upper end, below the bridge on Neponset street, and will extend down to the dam at the Mattapan paper mills. Two dredges will do this work, one being set at the upper end, the other at the lower.

PARK COMMISSION HOLDS HEARING TO OBTAIN OPINIONS

Many officials and residents of the metropolitan district towns that would benefit by the parkway projects authorized by the last Legislature, met in room 431 of the State House today in response to a notice issued by the metropolitan park commission. The hearing was held to secure expressions of opinion as to which projects shall be taken up by the commission first.

Should all the parks and drives to which the legislators have given their sanction be undertaken at once, an outlay of more than $1,000,000 would be required. Under the present appropriation acts, however, the commission is limited to an expenditure of $200,000 a year for the next five years, and must make its choice in outlining the work for the coming year.

The largest project authorized by the 1912 Legislature was the Dorchester boulevard to be constructed at a cost of $475,000. This would be from a point near the crossing of the New Haven tracks and Columbia street, thence to Neponset bridge, terminating at the Quincy shore reservation at Atlantic.

Three plans call for an expenditure of $100,000 each. These are the acquisition of land about Lost and Hammonds ponds in Brookline and Newton, a boulevard from Winthrop parkway, Revere, to the Winthrop shore reservation, and a boulevard from Hancock street, Quincy, to the Quincy shore reservation.

Others are a drive around Lake Quannapowitt, Wakefield, $50,000; a boulevard from Mystic Valley park to Mystic avenue, $75,000; a boulevard from Horn pond, Woburn, to Pond street, Winchester, $50,000; a drive from Boyden street, Dedham, to Stony Brook reservation, $10,000; a drive in Middlesex fells, near Fellsmere pond, $20,000; a boulevard from Fresh pond to Fresh Pond avenue, Cambridge, $15,000, and acquisition of land near Dorchester Lower Mills, $5000.

Representative Joseph A. Parker and William F. Davis, former mayor of Woburn, urged the construction of Horn Pond boulevard because the town had paid $50,000 in taxes without receiving and direct benefit. They pointed out that the Woburn, Winchester and Wakefield projects adjoined and could be carried out at the same time.

D. L. Sullivan, city solicitor of Woburn, and Representative H. L. Andrews also spoke in favor of the Horn Pond project.

George E. Walker, chairman of the board of selectmen of Wakefield, stated that Wakefield also was without direct connection with the metropolitan park system.

The construction of the Mystic valley boulevard was urged by Mayor Taylor of Medford and Edward D. Elder, city solicitor.

TEACHERS IN CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN JOURNALISM

Clean journalism occupies an important place in the October number of the Boston Teachers News Letter, the official organ of the Boston Teachers Club, the first issue of which appears this month. The effort in behalf of clean journalism is undertaken by the Boston Teachers Club through its seminar. Investigation of the effects of certain features of the modern newspaper upon the language, the conduct and the education of the child has been pursued through the collection of data from typical schools, and the study of the newspaper for vocabularies, sensational headlines, color effects and the moral point of comic sections.

As a result of its investigations the committee in charge, which is composed of Miss Catherine M. McGinley, chairman, Miss Gertrude L. Gardner, Miss Clara B. Cutler, Miss Ella F. Carr and Miss Amelia W. Watkins, has carried on a correspondence with various public spirited organizations within Greater Boston asking them to devote at least one number of their programs respectively to the consideration of "The Newspaper in its Relation to the Child." It has held conferences with editors of all newspapers having "comic" supplements. At these the difficulties of the school with respect to the pupils' language and ideals were presented. It was generally acknowledged by the editors that education has a difficulty and they a responsibility in the matter. The Twentieth Century Club, the Congregational Union of Jamaica Plain and the Boston section of the teachers' council gave special places on their programs for a consideration of the subject, through the efforts of this committee. The purpose of the seminar now is to bring this work to a close by addressing a circular to the editors of the city summarizing their position as educators in behalf of the club. This is at the editors' own recommendation as some among them have expressed a belief that a concrete, ready-to-hand statement of the case, uniformly understood, would be of common helpfulness.

The Boston Teachers News Letter is a small publication intended primarily for the purpose of instituting a regular means of communication between officers and members of the Boston Teachers Club. In additon, it aims to collect news of the progress of teachers throughout the world. It expects to follow the trend of educational thought, to broaden the knowledge of teachers regarding the problems of the day. It has been pronounced the best movement for the professional advancement of teachers that has ever been started in Boston. It is a paper "for the teachers, by the teachers."

The letter contains 20 pages but slightly larger than those of the usual friendly letter, closely printed with material showing the broad, deep and important reach of the club. The first number gives considerable attention to the superintendent, Dr. Franklin B. Dyer, this includes a sketch of his life, some things that are said about him, and some things said by him, a notice of the reception tendered him by the club and a greeting from Dr. Dyer himself. There are brief reviews of other teachers organizations and what they are doing or trying to do. Each month there will be reports from the Massachusetts Federation of Teachers' Clubs and the League of Teachers' Clubs. A poem by one of the teachers, discussions of school room subjects by experts, reports from committees, etc., announcements of lectures, classes and meetings complete the letter.

The editors of the Boston Teachers' News Letter are Grace E. Lingham, editor-in-chief. To her at 400 Columbia road, Dorchester, all business pertaining to the Letter should be addressed. The associate editors are: Anna C. Murdock, president of the Boston Teachers' Club; Helen E. Cleaves, Mary I. Adams, Catherine M. McGinley, Frances Forsaith, Esther W. Bates, Freda Salfisberg, Cora E. Bigelow.

RATIONAL GOLF

By STEVEN ARMSTRONG

We have been discussing the various lies which beset a golfer's path, and before closing the subject let me say that to play out of a bad lie well you must be deliberate in every movement. Should your next prove to be a perfect position for a ball to be in do not make that frequent mistake of trying to make up for the shorter distance the last shot gained for you by pressing the shot from the good lie. Nine chances out of 10 you will not only fail to retrieve the lost distance, but will not get the length you should from the good spot. So let the maxim be ever before you to swing up slowly after having played a shot from a bad lie. The same advice holds good after having dubbed a shot. Walk slowly in between, and stifle the natural inclination to hit hard to make up. Two bad shots never make one good one, and to dub twice in succession is enough to put any one off his game. So be deliberate in everything after playing from a bad lie, or having missed a shot.

The question of unusual stances also enters into fancy shots. Sometimes you are called upon to stand below your ball. The natural inclination in this case is to hook the ball around to the left, so you have to avoid it by advancing the right foot slightly and addressing the ball with the heel of the club. The tendency with your ordinary length of grip would be to hit the ground as it is so much nearer to you; so take hold of the club well down the leather, grading the distance you are below the ball. Swing slowly up, let the sweep be flatter than usual (more round your shoulders than your neck) and keep your body very steady and grip firmly.

In the reverse position you must adopt opposite methods. The ball is lying below the level of your feet, and you feel you have to reach for it. Put that idea firmly out of your mind, because it will ruin your stroke. Take as long a grip of the club as possible, and keep your weight firmly on your heels, even if you have to bend the knees slightly (in an extreme case) in order to address the ball comfortably. Do not allow yourself to lean over to reach it, because if you do your weight will go on your toes which, as every one knows, causes you to swing yourself off your feet. As you can well understand you are likely to slice when in this position, so advance the left foot a little and do not take a long swing, and once more the warning, be deliberate.

In these last two strokes you have been (unconsciously perhaps) indulging in a little of what is regarded as golf only for experts. When warned against the hook which is so likely to be in a shot when you play standing below the ball, you were told to advance the right foot slightly to counteract this tendency. In other words you played to slice and so kept the shot straight when the ball wanted to curl off to the left. So many people think to slice deliberately requires some sort of cutting across the ball as you do in tennis, but it is a very simple matter after all. Simply advance your right foot a little and swing exactly as you do for an ordinary shot. This is one of the reasons for advancing this foot when playing with the lofted iron clubs, because the natural inclination is to hook with them, especially in the longer shots.

Reversely, when you were playing the other shot, when a slice is so likely to beset you, you were to advance the left foot: i. e., play for a pull. This is a most useful accomplishment, as a ball from the tee played with a little pull runs farther than an ordinary shot, and is of great value on a seaside course, where it is nearly always windy. To obtain this in a long shot, simply alter the feet. Do not try to drag the arms around to the left in the follow through. A perfect swing with the left foot advanced must result in the desired pulled stroke. Now my last word is to remember the warning I gave in the article on fancy shots in putting. Do not attempt any of these experiments until you have played long enough to be certain that your power of playing straight hit shots is in no danger of being affected by these fancy strokes.

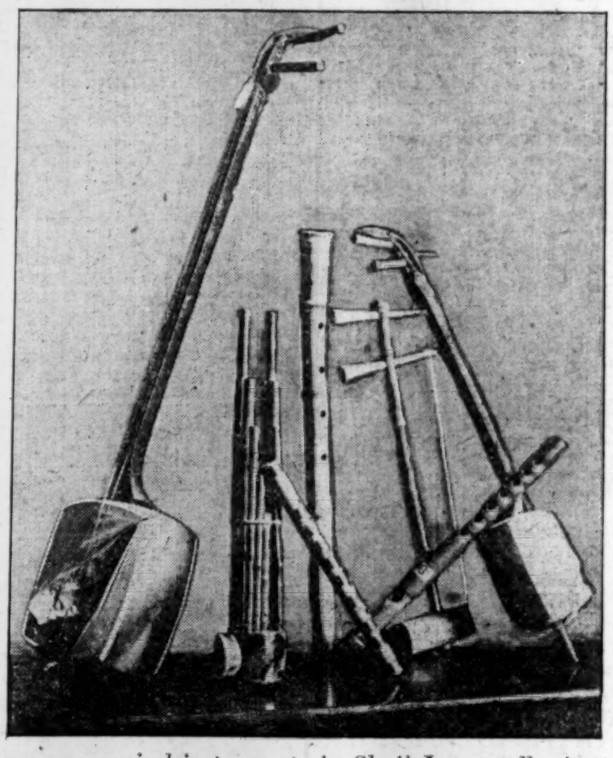
JAPANESE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS

Most Notable Collection in America Said to Be in Boston, City Associated with Japan's Modern Musical Education

What one Boston man did toward the introduction of western music in Japan, and the appreciative response with which his work in the schools of the Mikado's capital was met, are told in the accompanying article on the rare collection of Japanese musical instruments at the New England Conservatory of Music, Dr. Luther Whiting Mason's three years' work in Tokio also led to the first real understanding of Japanese music by occidentals.



Japanese musical instruments in Shuji Izawa collection at New England Conservatory of Music—Instruments, beginning at left, are the samisen; choshi, with 12 pipes; siakuhachi, or primitive flute; bamboo flute, fuye, teikiu, kokiu

ONE of the least known of the artistic exhibits of this city is the Shuji Izawa collection of Japanese musical instruments at the New England Conservatory of Music. This exhibit is said to need only a few additions of a historical nature to reveal very completely the progress of the musical arts in Nipponland from about the Ashikaga period to the present time. A paragraph in the annual announcement of this oldest of American music schools expresses the management's desire to add through gifts and loans to its present museum of rare and old musical instruments, which includes those of many countries. One of the collections most favorably situated for further upbuilding is this of Japanese treasures. The collections of Japanese prints, paintings and wooden and bronze sculptures at the adjacent Museum of Fine Arts, the finest collection of the kind in the world outside of Japan, are well known to Americans. It is not so generally appreciated that Boston's famous conservatory has probably the best offering in this country of musical rarities from the land of cherry blossoms.

Link with Japan

That the choicest gathering of Japanese musical instruments in the United States should be found in a New England institution is perhaps not unfitting, since it was through an invitation extended to Dr. Eben Tourjee, founder of the New England Conservatory, that a Boston musician, Luther Whiting Mason—the same who first placed music in the curriculum of the public schools of this city—was singularly honored by being called to Japan to accomplish for the Mikado's capital what he had done for his own home town. The three years which Dr. Mason spent in building up in Tokio a course of instruction according to European standards, also led to the first real understanding by occidentals of Japanese music. The existing Japanese methods, at the same time, were greatly modified. Under Dr. Mason's direction a text-book of songs for children, following the European system of notation was compiled by K. Shiba and Shoin Yamase. By 1883 these and many other songs had been studied by professors and pupils in the Japanese normal schools. A direct outgrowth was the adoption of the national anthem Kimiga-yo (May our Emperor's reign endure) of grave and thrilling melody.

In recognition of the American musician's services the government at Tokio some time ago forwarded to the conservatory the original charts which were first used in teaching Japanese students in accordance with European methods. They came through the courtesy of Shuji Izawa, who since he established, in 1879, a "bureau for investigation of music" (Ongaku Torishirabe-garaki) has been a foremost figure in the modernization of Japanese music. Mr. Izawa's original undertaking soon became an adjunct to the Higher Normal School of Tokio. In 1899 it took its present title of the Tokio Academy of Music.

Of late years Mr. Izawa has been specially interested in the possibility of uniting native with foreign music. Having closely studied the "Hymn to Apollo," which Vincenzo Galilei published in 1581 in his Dialogo della Musica Antica e Moderna, he became impressed by the resemblance between its melody and the tonality of his native land. He caused it to be harmonized in accordance with the standards of Banshiki Sho-cho and rendered on Japanese instruments. The experiment is reported to have revealed a remarkable parallelism between the two and to have confirmed Mr. Izawa's belief that Hindustan was the cradle of the musical art, whence it spread in opposite directions to Greece and Japan.

Conservatory Collection

The instruments given to the New England Conservatory by this most distinguished of Japanese musicians include early examples of practically all the forms ordinarily associated with the music of tea houses and festivals. One finds, of course, abundance of examples of that most common of Japanese instruments—the one with which Dr. Mason first investigated the Japanese musical scale—the samisen. Everywhere in Japan one notes the singing girl and her samisen. The instrument is made of hardwood with the usual sounding board, or belly, of drum-head stuff and strings of silk. On it are played the popular songs of the nation which, though different enough in musical quality, are said to be strikingly like our own in sentiment, consisting generally of romantic songs and of comic efforts. On the samisen, for example, the singing girls play the music of that popular ditty "Harosami" or "Spring Rain," which may perhaps be taken as an Oriental counterpart of "The Good Old Summer Time." It tells something about a bird which in a storm takes refuge on a plum tree and longs for his nest far away. Rendering such melodies on the samisen the singing girl, or gneko, never lacks for audiences, and even European travelers stop to listen while she thrums her three-stringed instrument with the little plectrum, or horn, of hardwood. The tone is said to be not unlike that of the banjo, although it is sweeter in timbre. Very old samisens appear in the conservatory collection.

Another familiar Japanese instrument is the biwa, resembling the lute of medieval Europe, except that it is played with a plectrum. It is said to have been named after Lake Biwa, which it resembles in shape.

Perhaps the most aristocratic of Japanese instruments is the koto, adopted from the Chinese kin. Its music has religious significance and it is used on solemn occasions. The perfect koto has seven strings, but there are all sorts of variations, running from the summa-koto, a one-stringed affair, up to a great unwieldy structure carrying from 25 to 50 strings. The most popular form of the koto is called the sono with 13 strings, played with a set of diminutive plectra and having a set of movable bridges, by adjustment of which the instrument is tuned. Every variety of the koto shows a sounding board which rests on the floor in front of the performer, who plucks the strings with little ivory picks attached to his fingers. The oldest form of the instrument is recorded as having been nine feet in breadth and to have had strings six feet long. The koto in the conservatory collection, though old and rare, is only about half this length.

Another stringed instrument which deserves particular mention is the kokiu. This has the usual primitive body of hardwood and skin. It might easily be confounded with the samisen, save that it is smaller and has four strings. The strands of its bow are tightened by winding the loose ends around the finger of the right hand. The kokiu is played with the body resting on the player's lap. It is tuned in fifths and it gives out tones that are very sonorous. Together with the samisen and the koto it makes a good combination for a trio. There is also an instrument like the banjo called the gekkin, and another, of the same general shape but having no frets, known as the shigen. These are all represented in the collection in Boston.

Wind Instruments

A favorite Japanese wind instrument is the fuye, made of a bamboo stick wound about with thread, except at the points where it is pierced and lacquered. It is not a very perfect instrument though it is superior to the one which was probably its progenitor, called the siaku-hachi. The last named is a mere rough tube with four holes on one side for the fingers and one opposite which is stopped by the thumb. This is not a traverse flute; it is blown through the end, as boys blow peas or pop-guns.

The other leading form of wind instrument is the hichiriki, resembling the oboe in structure, and played from the end like a flageolet. Travelers say that its tone as extracted by skilful players is astonishingly shrill and piercing.

Of instruments of percussion the Japanese are addicted principally to the barbaric drum. They have all sorts of drums, big and little, and of various shapes; some with two heads like two cones fastened at the apexes; sacred drums, classical drums, popular drums, metal gongs and others. The snare drum is quite unknown. The collection of drums at the New England Conservatory is less complete than of some of the other instruments, representing a gap which may be filled from other sources.

The koto—ancient, aristocratic instrument of Japan

The Japanese instruments at the music school, though unfamiliar to the general public, interest many of the 3000 or more students who throng the halls and classrooms. They especially interest, of course, the Japanese students, several of whom have been enrolled in recent years. A decade or so ago there was registered as a student a princess of the Japanese royal family whose identity, for obvious reasons, was kept carefully hidden until after she had left the school, and since then several pupils have been sent from Tokio to Boston.

SUPER-DREADNOUGHT NEW YORK LAUNCHED WITH GREAT CEREMONY

Prospective view of dreadnought New York, sister craft of the Texas, which is launched today at Brooklyn navy yard

NEW YORK—In the presence of President Taft and a great company of invited guests the battleship New York, latest of United States war vessels, was launched into the waters of the East river from the Brooklyn navy yard today. Built in the yard by government labor, the great fighting machine was declared by officials the greatest of all battleships. She is only 62 per cent completed, and it will be May, 1914, before she goes into commission, unless necessity arises.

Not in many years will there be a ceremony so pretentious as that which marked the launching of this battleship. The President, Secretary of the Navy Meyer, Governor Dix, Mayor Gaynor and all high officials of the army and navy who possibly could came to the scene to be interested spectators. Miss Elsie Calder, daughter of Congressman William Calder, christened the craft, and Miss Kathleen Fitzgerald, daughter of Congressman John Fitzgerald, was the flower girl.

At the bow end a great stand had been erected and covered with the national colors for the visiting party. All night workmen had been busy getting everything in readiness, testing the water-tight compartments, inspecting every inch of the ways down which the vessel was to glide.

The New York represents a displacement of 10,000 tons. To support that weight and make certain that it would reach the water without accident fully a quarter of a million feet of lumber were used in the construction of the "cradle," while 12½ tons of grease were spread by the yard workmen.

One Custom Is Gone

One effect was absent from today's launching. When Naval Constructor J. E. Bailey, who has had charge of the warship's construction gave the order "Look out below," he failed to couple with it the old-time admonition, "Saw off." There were no men along the sides to saw away the holding timbers. Instead Constructor Bailey pressed a little valve. Immediately hydraulic pressure released two steel fingers which held the hull in check and the vessel started down the ways.

The launching took place at the top of the floor tide. For half an hour before the time set, 10:30, the East river was closed to travel with the exception of a narrow course along the Manhattan shore.

One of the picturesque sights in connection with the launching was the presence in the yard of some of the navy's ships. There were the Wyoming and Arkansas, greatest of all of the battleships now in commission; the Florida, the Connecticut, which went around the world and is now relegated to the reserve fleet; the Utah, the Delaware and many lesser craft including the President's own personal flagship, the Mayflower.

The New York will be the ninth dreadnought launched for the American navy. When complete and with all her stores, ammunition, fuel and crew on board, she will displace 28,367 tons. As such, she will divide with her sister, the Texas, recently launched by the Newport News company, the distinction of being the most powerful vessel afloat on any waters.

BATTLESHIP GOES TO STANDARDIZE

Battleship Rhode Island will leave the Charlestown navy yard tomorrow for Rockland to complete her fall standardization trial. The Rhode Island will remain at Rockland about a week and from there will sail direct to the southern drill grounds.

Five torpedo boat destroyers, Monahan, Tripp, Patterson, Ammen and Burrows, which have been cruising off Cape Cod for several days, will dock late this afternoon at the navy yard. The destroyers will remain for several days where a fresh stock of supplies will be taken aboard.

CADMAN OPERA READ IN BOSTON

Charles Wakefield Cadman, the American song composer whose works have been frequently presented in recitals of recent seasons, is in Boston making arrangements for the publication and production of a new opera based on an Omaha Indian subject. According to Mr. Cadman's present plans, Miss Alice Nielsen is to impersonate the heroine of the drama. Henry Russell, the managing director of the Boston opera company, and Mr. Caplet, the musical director, are said to be favorably inclined to the presentation of Mr. Cadman's piece on the Boston opera stage another season.

seats and pull up stakes before the last performer in the ring bows his farewell, so the men concerned with dismantling an exhibition begin to take things to pieces, in places where it will not interfere with the general scheme that must seem intact until the very close.

Most Skilful Handling

Of all the various exhibitions that task the ingenuity of the planners, a display having to do with electrical appliances and electricity in general requires the most skilful handling. Take a great building like Mechanics hall in Boston, and any visitor to the place during the weeks when the show was under way must realize in some degree the great task of fitting the one exhibit with the other so that the machinery shall run smoothly throughout.

Then look at the place after the doors are finally closed to the public. Where before the bands discoursed popular music, the carpenters' hammers by the hundreds are doing their best to make conversation impossible. Decorators, who before the opening of the show brought their artistic skill to bear with such excellent effect are now bent only upon the task of saving what is possible from the wreckage. For while care is exercised to keep exhibits from damage as they are being taken down, the finery, etc., that was used for decorative purposes is usually considered to have seen its best days during the period of the show. Yet some articles are worth saving for another occasion.

It is down in the great basements that constitute parts of the average large exhibition building that much of the real work takes place. The street entrances to the exhibition proper are naturally brought into requisition and scores of wagons and auto trucks are lined up at the curb while many men bring the lighter articles from the building in that direction. But the side entrances and the back of the building show most activity. For down in the basement are the heavy machinery and goods that must be put in packing cases for transportation. Many of the displays come from a distance and are very valuable. The exhibitors cannot take chances of their being damaged.

The same management that looked after the arrangement of the exhibits attends to the dismantling. Such work as handling a great electrical exhibition today amounts to a specialty. Not many persons give their entire attention to this task and their service is in great demand in various parts of the country.

It took two years to make ready for the recent great electrical show in Boston, considered to be one of the finest, if not the finest, exhibition of its kind ever undertaken. It took less than four days to leave the building free of every vestige that would remind of what had been going on there for close to a month.

How It Is Done

"How do we do it?" asked the manager in charge of a group of workmen dismantling the Boston show. "Come along and I will explain our system."

If disorder is ever entitled to be termed picturesque, then the scenes on the main floor of the exposition building may be so described. Some artist might have reveled in the sight and labeled it harmony. Booths that a few hours before had been presided over by young women showing the advantages of using electricity in doing this or that were now in charge of workers who had only one thought, to lay low the structures.

Crash! Crash! came sounds from a far-off corner. There was something about the noise that reminded of breaking glass.

"Oh, well," remarked the guide laconically, "we haven't yet reached perfection. Something will happen now and then. On the whole the men are very careful. Showcases have a habit of giving way to a little pressure. The great wonder is that in all the haste so little is damaged."

Down in the basement the hammering was tenfold louder than above. Here men were nailing up great packing cases. All articles that have to be packed with care go to the basement.

"How do we know where the stuff belongs?" said the guide. "Easily enough. As soon as the goods reach here for the show, they are carefully marked. No, there is no room here to store the empty boxes. That would require almost a whole building by itself. We have a storehouse for that purpose elsewhere. Every box is marked with name of firm, position of goods in the building, and the article that is to be packed in it.

Experts Needed

"We have almost a thousand men at work, but these include the mechanics and others sent by the owners of displays. Take such a thing as this printing press. It requires experts to put it up and experts to take it down. The same is the case with other machinery."

Disconnecting gas and electric power also requires care. Any one knows what trouble is sometimes occasioned at the home when it is merely the question of taking down or putting in the gas range in the kitchen. With a thousand or more of such connections at the exposition the difficulty is increased proportionately.

One reason why speed is necessary in dismantling is because a large exhibition hall or building is always booked up well in advance. There is no time to lose between a show going out and another show going in. There have been times when moving out and moving in is done simultaneously, but that is not what either one or the other party considers ideal.

Perhaps a week after one great show has been held visitors return to attend another. There is great wonderment how all this transformation has been effected. And in due time again all this artistic effect has to be laid low, as in the case of the predecessor, and the hammer of the workingman and the process of tearing down have to be repeated because another show is booked.

DEBT TO LATIN CIVILIZATION IS APPARENT AS ONE TRAVELS

Italian Culture Stimulates Imagination of English-Speaking Races—Makes It Less Timidly Bourgeois

WORLD IS OPULENT

By JOHN HUNTER SEDGWICK

MANY tons of literature have been produced upon the subject of foreign travel, running all the way from Lessing's tour in Italy to the works of the ingenious and highly-to-be-well-looked-at Herr Baedeker. So, in view of this fact and that there might be some unwillingness to hear any more about foreign parts, we shall talk this morning of something that has to do with foreign travel but is not the travel itself. We mean by this the debt that men of the English-speaking races owe to the Romance nations and more especially to Italy.

There is no need for us to pretend that a good deal that is in Italy or that many that come from her, are admirable. The dregs of an old civilization are seldom decanted with any improvement. Equally, merely to admire or like a country because of physical beauty alone is to embark in the pursuit of a cult that always ends in shipwreck. The gods look best in marble. Above all it must be remembered that detractors and admirers alike of Latin civilization, save in a few cases, never penetrate beyond its outermost layer. This view, in an astonishing number of cases is that of the "glorified guidebook," a big one to be sure and richly annotated and illustrated, but a guidebook still. All these things happen when the man of the English-speaking races tries to incorporate himself in an intellectual mood that is really still strange to him; he has, in other words, created for himself a situation wherein he tries to think other men's thoughts and soon betrays his embarrassment.

On the other hand, had he acknowledged his obligation as a spectator, his work would at once have been easier and more original.

The debt, in fine, that the men of the English-speaking races owe to Latin civilization at home in Italy, is that it stimulates their imagination and makes it more facile and less timidly bourgeois through the set realization that certain picturesque and beautiful forms, institutions and customs are not merely so many museum exhibits but are facts, perhaps not the facts of their particular environment but of that of another nation. The Saxon delights with wide opened eyes to find that "it's all true." He has read perhaps of the cheerful architecture of southern lands and he may have seen pictures of it in books, but his entertainment of the fact is cold and perfunctory. What is a decorated house front to a man that must catch the 8:14 and live all day amid an order that is as new as it is uninteresting? But take him out to sea for a few days, let sky and water bound his view on every side; then over night let mysterious shapes of land loom through the warm darkness and slide softly by the ship, preparing a surprise for this poor orphan of beauty as he sleeps. Let there be in the early morning a rattle and roar of cable paying out, a splash of the great anchor and the stillness of a ship that swings in a new haven. Look out of the porthole; see the white and pink and yellow houses, their green jalousies and tiled roofs. Go ashore and halt in the square and listen to the donkey's feet clicking on the stones and regard the house on your left. Yes, it has a front of blue tiles bordered with a strip of raised yellow tiles and the sidewalk is of volcanic rock in a neat floriate design of black and white. It is a fact; they really do have houses with fronts like this and the books told you the truth.

The gentle wildness of the Atlantic mists is wreathing the hilltops and headlands; the soft air blows upon your cheeks, whispering to you the history of the world that you have known for thousands of years. Steadily and to your spectator's mind almost noiselessly this angle of earth goes on ordering its affairs before you, and you become aware that there is in your thoughts more opulence than you noticed before. Here are palms and lush roses, kids and lambs, white walls gleaming and soft bells ringing, and none of them are there for theatrical purposes but have the wonderful poetry of actuality. We are not to patronize this with our admiration; some very worthy people labor under the impression that life in foreign countries is a series of expensive charades arranged for their benefit. We admire and we see; we behold this world so wide and the point of it is that we are to think about it.

To the man of the more northern lands beauty distilled of Greek and Roman civilization is often a thing desired. His scheme has been made more rigid. But the southern lands, as has been said by some one, give his imagination a chance, it has its hour of play and can attach itself to new and hitherto undared conceptions. There is no need that he shall make himself what the Elizabethans called Hataniate or anything of the sort. His business is to take advantage of new sights that he may stretch his horizon; let him compare as much as he will; if it be done with candid pains his own country will suffer, improve and doubtless be loved the more. Doing this, wherever he may be, however great the aridity may seem about him, the gentle message will always whisper to him of the beauty and genius of the other lands that are as much a part of the great scheme as his own.

RADCLIFFE TIED IN FIELD HOCKEY GAME WITH NEWTON HIGH

Radcliffe College tied in a field hockey game with Newton High school Tuesday afternoon, after leading one point in the first half, with the score 1 to 1. Radcliffe was represented by Madeline Ellis l.f., Katherine Hodge, l.i., Jean Key c.f., Rachel Lewis r.i., Alice Davis r.w., Katherine Key (Ellen Eppendorf) l.h., Katherine Dummer c.h., Mildred Clark r.h., Dorothy Tewksbury l.f.b., Frederica Gilbert g.; Newton, Helen James l.w., Louise Fessendon c.i., Dorothy Vea c.f., Vera McKeen, r.i., Emily Proctor (capt.) r.w., Hilda Jones, l.h., Katherine Flanders c.h., Marion MacCallun r.h., Marguerite Proctor l.f.b., Barbara Willington r.f.b., Eleanor Keith, g.

The junior class has elected the following committee for the party to be given to the freshmen: Anna Holman, chairman; Constance Perry, Helen Crawford, Ethel Borden, Caroline Everett.

Jean Key has been elected captain of the sophomore hockey team.

The photograph committee for the senior class is: Frances Little, chairman; Jeanette Collins, Maude Russell.

On Tuesday the Citizen's Club held its first meeting, and national party platforms were discussed.

Trials are to be held Wednesday and Thursday for the "Stunt Show," to be given under the auspices of the Radcliffe Guild, Nov. 29, at 4:30 o'clock.

Regular class work in the gymnasium will begin Monday. Basket ball practise has already begun. Trials for the freshmen for the varsity were held yesterday. The first inter-class game for the championship will take place Dec. 13.

ARGUES AGAINST MUNICIPAL PLANT

Firm in his position that the latest proposition of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, to light the side streets of the city at the rate of $21.50 per lamp per year, is an advantageous one, and that he is still opposed to the expenditure of $300,000 for the urchase of equipment for a municipal plant, Mayor Fitzgerald issued another statement Tuesday in which he said in part:

"It seems to me a contract which saves the city $300,000 in 10 years without the expenditure of a single dollar on the part of the city, leaving the $300,000 now available for lamps for other necessary improvements, which contract is thousands of dollars less than other cities in the near neighborhood enjoy for an inferior service, is a pretty good position for the city of Boston to occupy, and one which, when the facts are thoroughly understood, will appeal to every thinking citizen of the city."

PASSAGE OF REFORM BILL BEING OPPOSED BY RADICAL SOCIALISTS

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—At the annual Congress of the Radical-Socialist party held at Tours the leader, M. Combes, made several important speeches. This congress is important from the fact that it is held just before the opening of Parliament, and outlines the policy of the opponents of the government in the event of its own party not being the one then in power.

It is generally recognized that the forthcoming parliamentary session is bound to be a memorable one in the history of French internal politics, inasmuch as the final settlement of the reform bill, which it will be remembered was passed under such dramatic circumstances during the last session in the Chamber, is to be fought out this session in the Senate. All parties opposed to the present government have been very active during the recess in organizing their forces throughout the country for the forthcoming fight which will take place sometime during the next few months.

It is interesting to note that at the Congress held last year at Nimes a resolution was unanimously passed congratulating both the proportionalists and the anti-proportionalists in the chamber who had decided to collaborate with the government then in power to pass a reform bill on the principle of ballot with representation of minorities. Special stress was laid upon the necessity of urgently dealing with the matter both in the Chamber and in the Senate.

Today at Tours this course is no longer approved of, though the only real difference of conditions is that at the time of the Nimes Congress, M. Caillaux was at the head of the government, whilst today it is M. Poincare, a difference of some importance to M. Combes and his friends.

The Radical-Socialist party, it may be pointed out, actually voted unanimously in the chamber last year for the principle of the "electoral quotient" which is the very essence of the present reform bill. This, however, is now regarded by them as a great attempt to destroy the republic, and an infringement of their political rights. The congress at Tours has been immensely interesting from a political point of view, indicating as it has the very nature and methods of the opposition to be offered to the present government in general and to the reform bill in particular.

It has been pointed out that, while the strategy and tactics of the Radical-Socialist party are to undergo no change in their effort to regain the control of the country, yet they are driven to the unpleasant and somewhat humiliating necessity of requiring their members to make a volte face and to vote definitely against the very principle that they voted for only a few months ago.

SHIP CANAL MAPS ISSUED

NEWARK, N. J.—To acquaint the people of the state with the proposed sea level ship canal, one of the links in the contemplated intracoastal waterway, the New Jersey ship canal commission has distributed 5000 relief maps. In addition to the maps, there is being circulated a booklet containing information from the ship canal commission reports.

CRETAN DEPUTIES ALLOWED TO ENTER GREEK CHAMBER

(Reproduced by permission)

Street scene on sunny day in Megalokastron, Crete, a storm center of the past

(Special to the Monitor)

CANDIA, Crete — The report telegraphed from Greece of the announcement made by M. Venezelos in the Greek Chamber, has been received with the utmost interest. The message explains that the Greek government has considered it advisable to maintain the status quo of the island the same as when the international troops left. The message points out, however, that Crete would be virtually governed by Greece, and that the Cretan delegates would be enabled to take part in the sittings of the Greek Chamber.

The message concludes with the announcement that in the event of war neither Greece nor Crete would be satisfied with half measures, but that a definite solution of the whole question would be arrived at. The Cretans are therefore requested to maintain law and order and to prepare for the elections in accordance with the Greek constitution.

BELGIUM DECIDES ON ARMY REFORM

(Special to the Monitor)

BRUSSELS, Belgium—It is stated that the government has decided to carry out important army reforms. The changes will be based on the enrolment of two sons per family instead of one. This will ensure a minimum annual contingent of 30,000 and a war footing of 250,000. With the reserve and the territorial army formed by the civic guard, the strength of the whole army will amount to 500,000 men.

LIBRARIES AND LIBRARIANS

Cooperation Between Libraries and Schools Shown by Bringing Teachers to Librarians' Meeti

AS a means of furthering co-operation between libraries and schools, the plan was carried out in Haverhill recently of closing the schools so that the teachers might attend the meeting of the Massachusetts Library Club. In addition to the inspiring address given by Dr. David Snedden, state commissioner of education, on the subject of school and library co-operation, the program also included an interesting address by D. W. Dawson Johnson, librarian of Columbia University, on "The Library as a Reinforcement to the School."

* * *

The Maynard Public Library is being reclassified by Miss Lilian C. Kerr under the supervision of the Massachusetts Free Public Library Commission.

* * *

Flora B. Roberts, librarian at Superior, Wis., tells thus of an effort made to meet the needs of the community and the times: "When I had been in Superior only a few weeks I noticed in the paper that a poultry show was in the air. I tested our library by the poultry interest, and found it very weak. Our very next order contained $10 worth of poultry books. Then we had little cards printed with the list of these titles, and they were distributed at the poultry show, which occurred a few weeks later. Today we have no more active group of books than those on the poultry industry."

* * *

That no library can satisfactorily fulfil its mission without the triple alliance of publicity, homelikeness and free access is the view expressed by E. A. Hardy in "The Public Library." In urging free access he says, "The great advantages of free access are the saving of time of both reader and librarian, the satisfaction to the reader of being able to browse among the books at will, the introduction to the reader of many books he would otherwise have never seen and the consequent encouragement to read more widely and more thoughtfully. It is urged against the system that readers continually misplace books and so create disorder on the shelves. Experience, however, shows that the public can be trained to leave the books on tables or ledges, so as not seriously to disarrange the shelves."

* * *

Those who do not even yet realize the importance of the free public library may well ponder the words of James Russell Lowell: "The opening of a free public library is a most important event in the history of any town. A college training is an excellent thing; but, after all, the better part of every man's education is that which he gives himself, and it is for this that a good library should furnish the opportunity and the means. . . . We often hear of people who will descend to any servility, submit to any insult, for the sake of getting themselves or their children into what is euphemistically called good society. Did it ever occur to them that there is a select society of all the centuries to which they and theirs can be admitted for the asking, a society, too, which will not involve them in ruinous expense and still more ruinous waste of time and health and faculties?"

* * *

Regarding a new function of the public library, Edward T. Stevens says: "The dissemination of knowledge by the simple distribution of books is the library's function; to make this apply to the promotion of engineering and industrial training is its newest problem. Whereas it has hitherto been contended that 'book learning' had nothing whatever in common with industrial efficiency, the libraries have begun to insist in turn that books can contribute to the skill of a man's hand, and are beginning to convince manual workers that books may become tools after all." This is the reason why more and more books that deal with the trades are being purchased by progressive libraries, and why the working man is discovering that the library is meant to serve him as well as to serve his children.

* * *

It is only four years since county free library service was started in California and today there are 21 counties carrying on this kind of work. Many other counties are preparing to take up the work. Each county that engages in this type of service establishes branch libraries in various parts of the county and sends books to these from a storehouse at the county seat. Under this plan people in the remotest corners are receiving a library service otherwise impossible. In small communities the books are usually placed in a store, postoffice, or anywhere convenient to the public. In larger communities reading rooms are maintained in charge of a custodian; being supplied with newspapers, magazines and books, they offer a most acceptable social center. The collection of books is changed in part or entire as often as the community wishes.

* * *

California has chosen this method of library service in preference to service by a system of traveling libraries because the size of the state renders the latter inadequate and expensive. In North Dakota quite a different condition exists. Here are 151 traveling libraries, representing a collection of 7165 books; 105 of these libraries are suited to community use, and 46 to school use. In order to advertise these traveling libraries, picture post cards have been printed showing several collections ready to start on their journey and stating, "The only expense to the borrower is the cost of transportation."

* * *

Considerable outside work is being done this season by the library of the Boston Women's Educational and Industrial Union along two lines: Help is given to college girls who wish to find material regarding women's industries and vocations; and club women who are preparing debates on similar subjects are furnished with reading lists and other material that will aid in the drawing up of convincing arguments. Information is obtained by consulting the librarian in person or by correspondence with her, and is gladly given not only to women in Boston but to any one who wishes it.

MONITOR GIVEN COMMENDATION BY CLERGYMAN

LOS ANGELES—Reynold E. Blight, minister of the Los Angeles Fellowship, highly indorsed and recommended the Christian Science Monitor in an address before an audience that crowded Blanchard hall on Sunday, Oct. 20. Mr. Blight's subject was, "The Menace of the Corrupt Newspaper," and he declared that the corrupt newspaper was a menace to the very integrity of our democracy.

As a concrete illustration of a newspaper of the highest class the speaker instanced the Monitor. He said: "In The Christian Science Monitor you have a newspaper that is thoroughly up-to-date and conforms to the highest standards of the newspaper profession. In its columns you find a concise yet comprehensive survey of the world's news. The daily progress of the world passes in brilliant review before the minds of its readers. The special articles keep one in touch with the broad sweep of the great political, economic, industrial and religious movements of the day. The Monitor is free from taint of provincialism; its readers are trained to consider private and public questions from the standpoint of world-wide relationship, and to judge them by the principles of eternal righteousness. That the people will support a paper of this character is shown by the tremendous success that has attended this enterprise."

LIBERAL WOMEN ARE EXPECTING THE VOTE FROM REFORM BILL

(Special to the Monitor)

LIVERPOOL, England—At the annual meeting of the Lancashire and Cheshire unions of Women's Liberal Associations held in Liverpool recently, a resolution was carried by a large majority in favor of the reform bill.

The meeting was of the opinion that the bill gave an opportunity of securing the admission of women to the parliamentary franchise. The resolution declared the reliance which the women felt in the assurance of the prime minister that amendments dealing with this point would be left to the House of Commons to incorporate in the bill, if such were the wish of the majority. It further urged all Liberal members of Parliament to vote for the amendments introduced by Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Lloyd-George or should these fail for an amendment on the lines of the conciliation bill.

The conclusion of the resolution stated that "the council regretfully records its opinions that if the reform bill should become law without enfranchisement of women, many members of Women's Liberal Associations will no longer be able to give active support to the Liberal party."

STATE TO REMIT $2,000,000

MADISON, Wis.—Secretary of State Fear and State Treasurer Dahl met at the Capitol as a state board for the remission of taxes for the ensuing year and decided to remit over $2,000,000 in taxes. In 1911 the board remitted a tax of $450,000 for state capitol purposes and $490,235 normal school tax.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE WILL BE RENOVATED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON — Complaints have been numerous during recent years as to the unsightly appearance of Buckingham palace. Since the completion of the Victoria memorial within a few yards of the gates of the palace, the dingy appearance of the walls has afforded a striking contrast to the clean white marble of the memorial.

With a view to ascertaining the cost of renovating the royal residence, scaffolding has been erected to enable the men to carefully examine and measure the surface. It is now announced that the plans for an architectural scheme have been passed by Sir Aston Webb, architect to the office of works. It is understood that the proposed alterations will cost some £60,000 or more, and will provide for a fine white frontage of Portland stone.

It will be remembered that Sir Aston Webb was the architect of the memorial referred to above, also of the Admiralty buildings at the entrance to the Mall. The work is to be commenced at once, and will be completed with as little delay as possible.

$1,000,000 FOR BRIDGES

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—Plans for three large St. Louis & San Francisco railroad bridges, which will cost approximately $1,000,000 will be completed and forwarded to T. J. Powell, purchasing agent, of St. Louis. The bridges are to be constructed across the Arkansas river at Van Buren and Tulsa, Okla., and the Red river at Arthur City, Tex. The order will be the largest placed by the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad since the building of the bridge at Memphis. In all 6000 tons of steel will be required for the new structures.

FASHIONS AND

HIS AIM TO FORCE GOVERNMENT

How Mr. Lansbury would secure woman suffrage

AN anti-government policy on the part of the Independent Labor party is being advocated by George Lansbury, M. P., writes a London contributor to the Monitor. A letter has been received by all the branches of the organization throughout the country calling for their support in an attempt to compel the Labor party to take up a definite and anti-government policy in order to enforce the enfranchisement of women this year.

Mr. Lansbury proposes that each branch shall pass and forward to the prime minister and Ramsay Macdonald resolutions expressing the determination that the political enfranchisement of women shall be granted without delay, condemning the introduction by the government of a franchise bill for men only, and protesting against the sham pledges with which the government have tried to blind the advocates of votes for women.

The resolution also contains a protest against the government being kept in power by the aid of Labor votes, and calling upon the Labor party to vote "constantly and relentlessly against the government from now onward until they are either driven from office or compelled to carry an early measure giving votes to women on equal terms with men." There is little doubt, Mr. Lansbury considers, that the government would choose votes for women rather than defeat.

HANDSOME FROCKS IMPORTED

Description of some displayed in New York

ONE of the handsomest frocks shown by one New York importer who has brought over a very large number of "specially designed" models is a frock simple in line yet superlatively rich, in exquisite white velvet, says the Sun. The bodice is cut with round decolletage softened by a little fine lace and there are wisps of the same filmy real lace by way of sleeves, but this bodice is simple to severity in line and the skirt has only a slight drapery movement at the right front and in the train, what the French call an enroulement rather than a drapery. All the borders of the clinging, graceful robe are beautifully embroidered in a geometrical design with very tiny dull gold beads thickly massed in the heavier parts of the design, but running out into the lustrous velvet whiteness in fine lines.

Much is done too with white and gold in brocades, some of the most superb of the French evening gowns being built up in such materials. A supple surface of gold embossed in white velvet, the velvet design rather small and covering the foundation so closely that only glints of the gold show through, is one of the developments of this white and gold idea most admired and makes a wonderful gown, the skirt simply draped and slit perhaps to show an under flounce of lace or tulle or a glimpse of silk clad ankle, the velvet rising on the bodice to the bust line, and above that the filmiest and most intangible of simple tulle or lace or chiffon shoulder drapery or covering and little sleeve.

One white brocade with a stripe of gold wheat heads running diagonally through it has, like the black and gold brocade of the same design, found many admirers, and there is a superb feather design brocade in gold and white. One must not forget either the quaintly lovely taffeta faille in white with prim little golden nosegays set at intervals over the white surface.

Then there are white tulles embroidered all over in sprig designs of tiny gold beads, white chiffons oddly printed with crimply gold designs, etc. Moreover, much cloth of gold is used in combination with creamy lace or other white material.

Bulloz has a white and gold model that is one of his pronounced successes. The foundation is a narrow, clinging robe of supple gold cloth. Over this on the sides and back of the skirt are draperies of beautiful lace. The gold cloth runs up in a point on the bodice front, but all the upper part of the bodice, as usual, is of the fine lace over flesh color tulle. Bodice drapery and skirt drapery are bordered by narrow lines of ermine. On the bottom of the gold cloth skirt front is embroidered a large motif in dull blue beads.

Beads again, you see, and beads play an important part in a distinguished Worth evening gown. But this gown was all in delicate gray and black, white tulle thickly sewn with minute beads of palest gray and bordered deeply by black beads as thickly set. There was a black satin underskirt and train, and a line of dark fur bordered the bodice drapery and the upper line of the diagonal tunic drapery. The only dash of color was in a huge vivid flowbr thrust into the girdle.

One finds a good deal of vivid color in the season's showing, used both as a relieving note and for whole frocks or parts of frocks. The poppy reds and pinks, emerald, shades of cerise, bright terra cotta, turquoise and brilliant blues, rich orange and yellow shadings, prelat purples, flame, geranium, etc., are all in evidence; yet, on the whole, the softer tones predominate and there is much gray and black and white.

The collars and the frills that adorn the collars are among the most original and interesting of the fashion details at the moment. This matter of the collar should receive very careful consideration when one selects frocks this fall, for often it is by the collar chiefly that the up to date frocks shall be known. The high collar with a line of fur at the top and the long sleeve flaring over the hand and with a rather wide finish of fur are much liked by most of the French designers, and for that matter, fur used in any way is one of the season's most vibrant notes.

WHITENED AGAIN

Flannels, after they are laundered for a while, become yellow. If they are soaked for two or three hours in soap, two tablespoonfuls of borax and the same amount of carbonate of ammonia, they will get white again, says the Montreal Star. These ingredients should be dissolved in five gallons of soft water. Boil the soap in the water until thoroughly dissolved, then add the remainder of the mixture.

CHICKERING PIANOS

Established in 1823.

By Maxfield Armfield

RETURNING to town after some months of travel, one of the first homelike signs to welcome us is the ubiquitous yellow glove. There is always a particular thrill about reencountering this article of apparel—at least, there is to those who take any interest in current affairs—something of the poignancy inspired by the return of that time which should be spring, or the "Picture of the Year," or the "positively last," appearance of Mme. Yvette Guilbert. We feel that one of these days we shall return to town, a little late, perhaps, to find the lingering leaves disconsolate and no longer setters of the one immemorial mode. We shall return to find Englishmen learning at last reasonably to talk with their hands, and promenading under the wistful branches with an air of excited release as they disport themselves in gloves of emerald, turquoise or pale cerise.

One can see how something of the sort might occur—very clearly indeed after visiting one of Granville Barker's productions—and it is therefore, as I say, with a quite perceptibly heightened emotion, part retrospective, part anticipatory, that the little yellow indices annually assure one of the empire's soundness at core.

Yet, strange to say, there must have been a time when the yellow glove was not even thought of. The Romans, I believe, wore them white and purple, each with long tassels of gold from the wrist—very becoming—not to speak of embroidery. Later, for some time, one concludes that such fripperies were not de rigeur save for hawking, which rough leathern gauntlets were no doubt the precursors of our familiar cockney friends. But these no longer pretend to any rational ancestry or raison d'etre, existing out of sheer British conservatism.

It is true that until quite recently they kept up the pretence of being made of leather. As we write, we feel again the slither of soapy water oozing about the slimy digits—now distended, now flaccid, and of a pitiful griminess in the gray suds.

The scene is changed: it is a couch within the studio,
And there before the open stove the steaming gloves, a-row;
The scene is changed: before his glass their donner (sadder now)
Lifts his right arm for one more tug, and silently wonders how Mere soap turns leather into board . . .

But even these pseudo-leather brutes were an absolute fake. The yellow was no essential quality of them. On the contrary, it contributed to that first washing water a good deal of its horribly soupy nature, leaving the dry and crackling article not only uninviting to reassume, "but—of a pallor!" as our good friends so aptly put it.

I find that now there is no more pretence. They are simply made of cotton or wood fiber or paper or something that is decently washable; and though there seems some feeble attempt at the surface of wash-leather soon be given up: and yet, th they retain that first fine care Let us hope it is because once relinquished, instead o green taking its place, we mi into the morbid masculine cr black. Meanwhile, all is in the pot. Every cherishable habit tom is challenged, and no doubt low friends will shortly be seen rather uneasily among silk hats tional constitutions, as doubtful of continued dominance.

The silk hat will be transfor something new and (incon more strange, and that withou of regret, but let us at least h when those light-hearted you have promenaded their fill in a scarlet and purple they will ev readmit our old friend on a worthier footing when he shall to flaunt his yellow, not under b guise and with untruthful exc frankly and fearlessly because he to be yellow for its own gay sake.

WHAT TO HAVE THANKSGIVING

Variety of things to gratify the appetite

HOW shall the menu for Thanksgiving be arranged and what dishes shall be chosen?

Conditions are so different from those prevailing when the feast was instituted that it is not easy to put ourselves in the place of those pioneer housekeepers. We have such great variety at hand every day in the year that it is difficult to find foods sufficiently unusual for a special Thanksgiving.

In its main features the dinner on this holiday should follow the pattern of those who established the day.

What the goose and mince pie are to the later holiday, the turkey and pumpkin pie are, and should continue to be, to Thanksgiving.

Certain other foods deserve a prominent place at this time, either because they have been associated with this dinner from the earliest celebrations or because they are native Americans; such are cranberries, oysters, potatoes and Indian corn.

Soup and salad are not essential parts of a Thanksgiving dinner, but there may be good reasons for serving one or both. The soup may be made of oysters, celery or corn.

The fish course also may be omitted unless there are some local or family reasons for its introduction.

There are several forms in which the cranberry may appear at the Thanksgiving feast. The jellied berries are preferred by many. To prepare in this way pick over and wash the fruit; to one quart add a pound of sugar and a cupful of water. Cook rapidly until each berry has cracked open, then put in molds. When cold, many of the berries will be as round as before cooking, but tender and filled with jelly.

Cranberries prepared in this fashion may be used for pies, either baked between two crusts or in one with strips of pastry arranged crisscross on top.

Oysters belong to Thanksgiving according to tradition, because friendly Indians who joined the early celebrations brought gifts of this shellfish. Sometimes the turkey is stuffed with oysters, or they are chopped and added to the crumb stuffing, but a strong flavor is likely to be developed and the oysters become tough and indigestible before the turkey is thoroughly cooked.

A garnish of fried oysters may surround the turkey instead of the string of little sausages which makes of him, as an old cook-book has it, "an alderman in chains." Better yet, a dish of scalloped oysters may accompany the bird.

If in no other place, a preliminary course of raw oysters or oyster soup may appear before the turkey.

Since the early settlers owed so much to Indian corn, that grain in some form should be part of the Thanksgiving dinner. Either brown bread or baked Indian pudding was included in the great grandmother's dinner, but her descendants prefer succotash or corn pudding as vegetables.

Squash and onions are the favorite Thanksgiving vegetables in many households. Squash seems to have come to us from the Indians and was raised by them in the corn fields.

Nuts are yearly becoming more prominent in our diet. The butternut is especially appropriate. Next to the butternut, the peanut would probably come, since it has so firm a hold on the American appetite. Chestnuts are growing in favor.

BUYERS UNITE FOR PROTECTION

Housewives aroused by excessive cost of living

MUCH of the progress in business of the present day has been due to combination, but a large percentage of the increased profit claimed for effective combination is due, not to the economy of organization, but to encroachment upon the rights of unorganized consumers, writes Mrs. Julian Heath, national president of the Housewives' League, in Good Housekeeping. Organization, she says, working against a vast army of scattered consumers, has arrogated to itself the power to profit at the expense of its patrons.

Business organization cannot easily be broken up, and possibly should not be broken up. For their own protection, however, the patrons of organized business should oppose to this power a combination of their own, vigilant and alert in the interest of the consumer.

Such an organization of buyers against the sellers should not interfere with progress or the legitimate profit of business. Accepting conditions as they stand, such an organization should have for its main purpose the defense of organized patrons, who have heretofore been helpless against the ruthless self-aggrandizement of the great organized business interests and the unfair methods often employed by the small interests.

No other part of society is so seriously assailed by business combination as is the home. The profession of housekeeping has been the marked victim. It is exploited by the manufacturers of impure foods; by the manufacturers of "fake" textile fabrics; by the almost universal use of dishonest weights and measures; by the insanitary conditions of commercialized home industries, such as laundries, bakeshops, canneries, and sweatshops; and by the greatest of all evils, the manipulation of the prices of the necessities of life.

The excessive cost of living has engendered a crisis which has aroused the women of the nation to conditions that menace the home and has awakened earnest women to the grasping and unscrupulous action of the organized forces, industrial, economic and political, which are attacking the home. Not only the women, but the whole nation is aghast at the situation.

If such tendencies of business are to be remedied or checked, it is imperative that the housewives erect a barricade of organization against the onslaught of well-organized forces. The time has arrived for a complete and effective organization of the housewives of the nation, and the movement in that direction is rapidly sweeping through the country.

This new and important step not only makes for great progress in the profession of housekeeping, but may prove the solution of the most disturbing problem of the day. An effective check placed upon the aggressions of the great combinations may bring to them a sense of moderation.

In heating the oven the drafts should be closed when the coal is well started. In a word, to save fuel plan ahead and then watch drafts.—Montreal Star.

BREAD-MAKING METHODS GIVEN

Prize bread, pulled bread and corn bread

INQUIRY is made from time to time about methods of bread-making, and the following directions from the San Francisco Call may be helpful:

Prize bread—Dissolve one cake of yeast in a cup of water, then add a pint of hot milk, also a tablespoon of butter and lard melted. Sift four cups of flour, three teaspoons of salt, two tablespoons of sugar, beat all well to make a stiff batter, set to raise over night and have the pan well covered. When ready to knead add enough flour to make a soft dough and knead it until it is very light and full of air bubbles. Put in pans well greased with lard, also brush some melted lard on top and sides of loaves; let it raise till it reaches the top of the pans. This recipe makes three large loaves.

Pulled bread—Pulled bread is much liked with salads. You cannot make it of old bread nor with very good success of home made bread. Buy a loaf at the bakery which was baked early in the same morning and in the late afternoon or evening pull it apart so that the crumb is left in long ragged strips. Place the broken bread on a tin and set in a cool oven until it has become a light yellow color. When ready to serve heat again in the oven.

Buttermilk bread—Sift four cups of flour into a basin; add a quarter of a teaspoon of salt, teaspoon of sugar and baking soda each, two teaspoons of cream of tartar, one well beaten egg and enough buttermilk to make a soft dough. Knead lightly, lay on a buttered tin and bake in a hot oven for 35 minutes. Sufficient for one loaf.

Corn bread—One cup of yellow cornmeal, two cups of flour, two tablespoons of sugar, three teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of butter (melted), one egg and a cup of milk.

Hot biscuit—One quart of flour, three heaping teaspoons of baking powder, one teaspoon of salt, two tablespoons of butter; stir in a pint of milk, roll out to the thickness of an inch, cut with small biscuit cutter, lay them close together on a well greased baking tin; bake 15 minutes in a rather hot oven.

Cornmeal pancakes—Half cup meal, boil to a mush in two cups of water; when cool add about pint of milk, well beaten egg, level teaspoon salt, teaspoon baking powder in enough flour to make a batter, tablespoon molasses to make them brown.

Yeast muffins—Scald and cool one cup of milk, add one half level teaspoon of salt, a rounding teaspoon of sugar, the white of an egg beaten stiff and add the yolk beaten separately. Add one fourth of a yeast cake dissolved in one quarter cup of lukewarm water, one tablespoon of butter and enough flour to make a drop batter. Let rise very lightly, then drop into well greased muffin tins or muffin rings and bake.

RUBBER RACK

A case for rubbers may be made by the boy or man who is handy with tools, and it will be a great convenience for the family, says the Ladies Home Journal. One was of plain wood, 36 inches high, 15 inches wide and 12 inches deep. It had five shelves, making six compartments; the bottom one higher than the rest, for overshoes. The back was a fitted board, easily removed to clean the box. Each shelf was labeled for the person who was to use it. Across the front a curtain of dark color was hung.

TIME FOR SALT

An expert vegetable cook says that the secret of well seasoned vegetables is not so much how much seasoning is used as when the salt is added. She maintains, says the Newark News, that all green vegetables should be salted while cooking, but that any vegetable which grows beneath the ground, such as potatoes, onions, turnips, carrots and beets should be salted after they are cooked.

SMART SET CORSETS FOR THE SMART SET

No. 40 $4.00

TO-DAY we'll tell you about the most "modest violet" of all—Smart Set No. 40.

This corset has a low bust—not extreme, but distinctly low. The skirt is very long, with a deep elastic gore on each side, so that you can sit down in peace and the corset won't ride up.

No. 40 (like Nos. 53 and 54) has the happy faculty of making a slim form appear well-rounded, while it gives a medium or even plump figure a modish slender suppleness.

No. 41 is a similar model, but the bust is a little higher. Very great value—$4.00.

New Materials, New Designs and Improved Construction Make Smart Sets the Most Perfect Corsets in the World

ONE HUNDRED TALKS ABOUT OUR STORE ETHICS—No. 8

Ours is a two-ideaed Store.

Here's the other side.

It is something to know that in the very heart of this great city is a meeting and greeting and resting place where you are always more than welcome.

Checks for your parcels, no matter how many. Retiring room, writing room, bureau of information and not a cent to pay.

Walk about, look about. You won't attract attention; hundreds are walking and looking just as you are.

You don't feel like every salesperson's eye is on your pocketbook. You can study the styles and the stuffs; you can see the seers; you can go or come, hurry or loiter, or stop in a quiet nook and not for a moment feel like an intruder, or as if any one begrudges you elbow-room. No one seems to see you, or to care what you do. You realize that you are welcome as a gazer-on.

We wish to make the store more like home to you than anywhere else you can go outside your own door.

TRIED RECIPES

SAUSAGE BUNDLES

ROLL out plain paste in six-inch squares, rather thin. Cut Frankfurt sausages in thin slices, rejecting the skin, and lay the slices in two rows in the centers of the pieces of paste; double, pinch ends together, and fold as you would do up a bundle, wetting the edges to make them stick; then place them on ice until ready to bake. Bake them in a hot oven 15 minutes and serve hot with French or German mustard. This is a popular dish for Sunday night supper, especially with men—Good Housekeeping.

HUNGARIAN CHICKEN

Clean and cut up a chicken; fry brown in butter, to which a choped onion and salt and pepper have been added; add a cup of cream sauce, a cup of cream and a tablespoon of chopped parsley and cover and cook slowly for 20 minutes longer. Garnish with toast points and serve.

FRENCH FRICASSEE

Clean and cut up a chicken; fry an onion and a carrot cut fine in a liberal quantity of butter; add three tablespoons of flour, salt and pepper to taste, cup of tomatoes (either fresh or canned) and three cups of stock, milk and water. While the sauce is cooking, saute the chicken in another pan in butter, lard or drippings; add to the sauce, cover and simmer till done. A can of mushrooms, cut fine with their liquor, added about 15 minutes before the chicken is done is a great addition.

MINCED CHICKEN

Put the bones of a chicken into a saucepan with water enough to cover; add two onions sliced and fried, two carrots cut fine, a blade of mace, salt and pepper to taste. Boil till the stock is strongly flavored, then strain and thicken with butter and flour. Chop the cold chicken fine, put it into the strained sauce, heat thoroughly and serve on toast. Squeeze the juice of a lemon over the chicken just before serving. Garnish with lemon quarters and parsley or celery tips.

FRICASSEE OF VEAL

Take a breast of young veal, cut into two pieces to suit; blanch in boiling water, strain and let the meat cool. Put into saucepan, cover with boiling water, salt to taste, add a small onion, one clove, a small piece of bay leaf, let boil half a hour, then add sprig of parsley, leek and celery tied together; boil meat until done, take out meat, thicken gravy with flour and butter rubbed together, pour gravy over the yolk of one egg, strain and pour over the veal. Sprinkle with chopped parsley.—San Francisco Call.

GINGER PUDDING

Mix one cup of molasses with one cup of milk, add two tablespoons of melted lard, one level teaspoon each of ginger and soda, a saltspoon of salt, one tablespoon of vinegar and four cups of sifted flour. Add the last cup of flour carefully, because the molasses may be so thick that it will not all be needed. Bake in a shallow pan, and serve with a lemon sauce or steam in a mold two hours.—Philadelphia North American.

LINGERIE PILLOW

The filet crochet medallions would make a beautiful lingerie pillow. Arrange them in a diagonal manner across the cushion, the large one in the center and a small one at each side.

Then in the two opposite plain corners a spray of leaves or leaves and blossoms of some conventional pattern should be placed. This work should be solid embroidery or solid embroidery combined with eyelet.

An effective way to join the front and back of this kind of a lingerie pillow is by means of a ladder work of crochet, through which a ribbon is run, says the Pittsburgh Post.

A lingerie pillow slip is always useful and is particularly nice for the couch, either in the bedroom or living room.

BLACK KID GLOVES

When black kid gloves become rusty at the finger ends they may be restored by adding a few drops of black ink to a teaspoonful of olive oil and applying it with a camel's hair brush.—Louisville Herald.

The Reason:

The two cars which we have on exhibition at the Electric Show, and which have been handled by a curious public for nearly a month, are very slightly soiled; not enough to make any material difference in the car, but enough so that we would not care to sell them to a customer without explaining this fact.

PLACKET DEVICE

To keep a placket from tearing, fasten the last or bottom hook and eye and then clamp it with a hammer, says the Montreal Star. It cannot come unhooked, cannot tear or rip and eases the strain on the goods just below the placket at the spot which so often is torn, even on comparatively new goods.

NEW SOUTH WALES PROSPECTS GOOD

(Special to the Monitor)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Aus.—The spring agricultural and meteorological records of New South Wales indicate splendid agricultural and pastoral prospects over the whole of the state.

Temperatures, as a general thing, have been warm and conducive to the growth of vegetation. Growing crops are flourishing, and grass is becoming more plentiful. In most places of the coast there is a good show of clover. Stock, both large and small, contiues to pick up in condition.

The finer weather has facilitated shearing, and the work is becoming more general. Farmers everywhere are preparing land for spring planting of such crops as maize, potatoes and lucerne, and a good deal of fallowing is still being done. The dairying districts, as a whole, present excellent prospects, and factories now report a gradually increasing output.

La Vida Corsets

beautify the natural lines of the figure and are so designed as to make more beautiful forms for the gowns of the present mode after which they are patterned in style and mold. They impart to the wearer an erect carriage and make even more graceful the draped effects of the latest gowns, which depend so much upon the excellence of the corset beneath.

La Vida Corsets are to be had in many shapings to fit every figure from slim to robust and are responsive and resilient to a high degree, giving freedom and comfort as well as style and durability. The Excelon boning is far superior to whalebone in strength and flexibility and is non-rustable. Its strength insures perfect fit.

Corsetieres will be in attendance to demonstrate these famous corsets, and their knowledge of figure requirements, and the proper selection of corsets best adapted thereto is at your service without any obligations on your part whatever.

Alterations made absolutely free of charge on all Corsets from $1.50 to $25.00 by expert corsetieres

REAL ESTATE NEWS

One of the largest purchases of land that has been consummated in Back Bay during the past 10 years has just taken place in the Fenway, through the sale of a block of 348,485 square feet of ground containing about 8 acres, located on Avenue Louis Pasteur, Riverway and Brookline avenues and assessed for $279,300. This land is conveyed by Charles D. Rood to the Boston Academy of Notre Dame for improvement in the near future with buildings for educational purposes. John C. Kiley negotiated the transaction.

Thomas M. Smith has conveyed title to the 2½-story brick building, 2 Smith court, near Joy street, Beacon hill, to Elizabeth Silverman, who has placed deed on record. There is a ground area of 1536 square feet, taxed for $2300, included in the total assessment of $4500.

Henry S. Dowe has just resold the estate recently purchased at 2 Otisfield street, Gaston street, Roxbury, consisting of a 2½-story single frame house, valued by the assessors at $6700. The lot contains 6318 square feet, and carries $2200 of the assessment. John J. Canty is the buyer.

EAST BOSTON AND CHARLESTOWN

The brick house and 1163 square feet of land, 13 Winthrop street, corner of Paris street, East Boston, has passed into the hands of Joan M. Snow, who purchased title from William B. Smith, trustee. The property is assessed for $4400.

Arthur L. Barr is the purchaser of 2500 square feet of land, corner of Short and Medford streets, Charlestown, assessed for $1900. M. Louise Wight conveyed the title.

BRIGHTON TRANSACTIONS

J. Frederick Ramsdell bought a parcel of vacant land from Marion M. Wilson, located at the junction of Royal and Hooker streets, containing 3453 square feet, valued at $1000 by the assessors.

Another purchase of vacant land made by William J. Sarsfield, from Ellen L. Stacy, contains 3517 square feet, taxed for $700, and is located at the corner of Murdock street and Cypress road.

BUILDING AT MIDDLEBORO

An unusually large amount of building is going on in town. At the west side of Vine street a new four-apartment house has been completed and another is under construction. A new three-apartment house is being built on Cambridge street and another on Cottage court. On Everett street a new three-family house is nearing completion. At the Nemasket mills several cottages have been finished.

MAYOR LUNN IS HELD FOR COURT

LITTLE FALLS, N. Y.—George R. Lunn, mayor of Schenectady was held today for the action of the grand jury by Judge Collins on a charge of refusing to obey Sheriff Moon's command to move along when the sheriff was trying to disperse a crowd when the Socialists were arrested for addressing strikers. One special policeman was shot, and 20 strikers injured in a struggle today growing out of the mass picketing of the mills by persons who are affiliated with the Industrial Workers of the World and their sympathizers.

A second disturbance occurred later when Chief Long and a squad went to I. W. W. headquarters in Gorman street to arrest some of the participants in the earlier affair. One man was injured when the building was entered and 20 men arrested.

COTTAGE OWNERS MUST GET PERMITS

Several owners of summer cottages at Onset were before the board of harbor and land commissioners this morning, to explain why they have erected or maintained cottages below mean high water mark, without authority from the commonwealth. Through their counsel, George W. Stetson, they explained that they purchased the properties from Joseph A. Shaw, who held a license from the commonwealth to do certain work, and they believed that this license protected them in the work they have done.

The board however instructed all of the persons who have built structures below high water mark, that they must at once apply for licenses to maintain such structures, and when such petitions are filed the board will take up the matters on their merits.

MISSING SAILORS SAFE

BROWNSVILLE, Tex.—Twelve sailors missing since the steamer Nicaragua was disabled and abandoned in the gulf on Oct. 16, were saved. The sailors arrived today at Point Isabel, 20 miles south of here, after a 54-mile walk. They drifted for five days before being picked up by a lifeboat.

IMPROVEMENTS MEETING TOPIC

The first meeting of the Watertown Board of Trade and Improvement League this season will be held in the town hall this evening. So many subjects for discussion have been offered that the executive committee has decided to bring them all before the meeting under the head of "How Shall Watertown Seek Improvement?"

Discussion by members of the Association representing the various improvement societies of the town, it is believed, will have better results than if some speaker from elsewhere talked to the people. A musical program has been arranged.

FIRE IN A LUNCH ROOM

Fire damaged the building and stock at 239 to 245 Congress street to the extent of about $2000 at 4:30 o'clock this morning. The blaze started in the kitchen of the Congress hall dairy lunch room. The flames were confined to the first floor, occupied by the lunch room.

THREE NEW FREIGHT STEAMERS IN BOSTON SERVICE TO BE ADDED

poned by the Governor's council for another week at the request of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and others who desire to be heard.

The directors of the Hamburg-American line, who arrived in this city from New York early this morning, were shown about the city by the Boston agents of the company.

C. C. Patterson, freight representative of the line in Boston and A. Van Schroeder, New England passenger agent for the company, met Albert Polis at the Chamber of Commerce today, whence an automobile trip was taken.

Mr. Polis, with Dr. Sickles, took quarters at the Copley-Plaza this morning and after breakfast visited the down town offices of the company.

Tonight a dinner will be given to the Hamburg-American directors at the Copley-Plaza by the port directors and a number of prominent state and city officials are to attend.

Hugh Bancroft sent a letter to Lieut.-Gov. Robert Luce, stating that no assurance at present had been given that the Hamburg-American line would pay the rental of $70,000 a year, but called attention to the fact that the state would benefit by improvement to the surrounding vacant land.

The letter in part:

"Mr. Hamlin, executive secretary, telephoned me that you wished to know what assurance there was that the Hamburg-American line would pay a rental for the Commonwealth pier that would balance the $70,000 a year present rental which the state foregoes in cancelling the present lease.

"No such assurance is contemplated, either in the contract before you, in the past legislation of the state, or in the practise prevailing in all North Atlantic ports outside New York.

"There have been no negotiations for the details as to the use of the pier nor can such negotiations be effectively conducted until the state regains control.

"The conditions under which shipping is conducted at North Atlantic ports are such that it is extremely unlikely that the Hamburg-American line or any other steamship line that may come to Boston for many years yet, will at the start pay directly any substantial sum for the use of any piers, whether controlled by the state or the railroads.

"The tendency of shipping to center at New York is so strong that the four principal ports that compete with New York—Boston, Montreal, Philadelphia and Baltimore—(and the minor ports as well) have found it necessary to offer wharves to ocean ships free of direct charge. This is the situation at the publicly owned docks at Montreal and at the railroad docks at Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore. In these ports a charge of so much a ton is assessed on the goods handleed on the wharf, as is contemplated in the contract before you.

"Adjoining this pier, the state owns more than 6,000,000 square feet of solidly filled land which has been idle for a generation. Is it assuming too much to estimate that the effect on the value of this adjoining land when the Commonwealth pier, now idle and decaying is equipped as a modern terminal and used by some of the finest ships in the world, will be an enhancement of fully 30 cents a foot or some $2,000,000 on the state's more than 6,000,000 feet?"

Albert Ballin, director-general of the Hamburg-American steamship line, yesterday sent word to Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the port directors, that while he would be unable to come to Boston today, other directors of the steamship line would come to complete negotiations concerning the establishment of the Hamburg-American service here next year. Mr. Ballin made this announcement in the following telegram to the chairman:

"I very much regret that I shall be unable to come to Boston, but, owing to several important conferences, I must very reluctantly send my regrets. My associate directors, Dr. Heckscher, Mr. Huldermann, Mr. Polis, Mr. Sickel, will, however, attend to represent our company. I hope that with the hearty cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and the authorities of Boston the new service which we are to establish next year will meet with great success, and you may be assured that will be accomplished in a satisfactory way. I am very much impressed with the earnestness and the energy with which the representatives of Boston are pursuing their efforts to make Boston harbor a desirable landing place for large passenger and freight steamers. Many thanks for the courtesies extended to me and the representatives of our line. With best respects.

"ALBERT BALLIN."

FLUCTUATIONS WIDE AND MARKET TONE SOMEWHAT UNSTEADY

Early Rise in Security Prices Was Followed by a Break Which Sent Prices Downward Rather Rapidly

LOCALS IRREGULAR

Stocks took a sudden spurt at the opening of the markets this morniing on the strength of more favorable Balkan news. The opening in New York was wide, gains of a point or more having been made by the active issues. The shorts were forced to cover in a hurry and this helped to make the market a buoyant one in the early trading.

Prominent in the advance were Steel, Reading, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Amalgamated Copper. Following the early spurt prices sagged off, and at the end of the first half hour the tone was unsettled.

The local copper shares participated largely in the advance. Lake Copper, Calumet & Arizona, Granby and Butte & Superior were strong features.

About the time that many were inclined to believe that the market was on its way upward the bears made a drive at it which sent prices downward at a lively rate. Before midday the leading issues were at or below last night's closing prices.

Reading opened up 1⅜ at 170½, advanced to 171¼ and then declined below 160. Union Pacific opened up a point and then dropped the gain. Steel sold at 75¼ to 75⅝ at the opening compared with last night's closing of 74⅝ and then declined more than a point. Amalgamated Copper opened up a point at 84 and declined to 822 before midday.

Lehigh Valley opened up 1¼ at 174¾ and declined more than 2 points. Canadian Pacific opened up 3¼ points at 260½ and dropped back to 259 before midday. Mexican Petroleum opened up ⅜ at 85¾, advanced to 86½ and declined under 85. American Can opened up ⅞ at 41¾ and after improving to 42 declined to 40.

The local market followed the lead of the New York market. Butte & Superior opened up ⅝ at 44¼, rose to 44½ and declined to 43⅛ before midday. U. S. Smelting opened up ⅜ at 45 and declined nearly a point. St. Mary's Land was off ½ at the opening at 49½ and dropped 1¼ further. North Butte opened up ½ at 33⅛ and declined a point.

Further declines were made by securities in the afternoon and then there was a moderate rally. Steel, Reading, Amalgamated Copper, Union Pacific, American Cities, American Sugar and in fact the entire list showed declines of a substantial order. At the beginning of the last hour prices were somewhat above the lowest of the day.

LONDON—Although the securities markets finished below the best prices the improved general tone was not impaired.

Consols left off at the top, notwithstanding a 5½ per cent rate for call money and heavy borrowing from the Bank of England.

Home rails retained cheerfulness and continental buying imparted irregular strength to foreigners and mines.

American railway shares and Canadian Pacific reacted on the curb. De Beers up 9 1-6 net at 19 7-16. Rio Tintos advanced 1⅜ to 73⅜.

Continental bourses closed firm.

THE WEATHER

UNITED STATES WEATHER BUREAU PREDICTIONS FOR BOSTON AND VICINITY: Fair and colder tonight and Thursday; moderate variable winds.

WASHINGTON—The U. S. weather bureau predicts weather today as follows for New England: Colder and generally fair tonight and Thursday; moderate east to west winds.

The disturbance that was central over Lake Superior yesterday morning is now passing out the St. Lawrence valley. It is producing unsettled weather with mild temperatures and light showers in the eastern portion of the lake region and New England. A long ridge of high pressure extending from Montana southeastward to Georgia is producing pleasant weather with low temperatures in the western and southern sections. Freezing temperatures extend as far south as Kansas.

COMMONWEALTH GAS EARNINGS

A partially estimated increase of 26.7 per cent in gross earnings was made by the Commonwealth Gas & Electric Companies for September, 1912, as compared with September, 1911, the figures being $14,090.84 this year and $11,118.11 last year. Those for 1912 are partly estimated on account of a change in meter reading. Factors helping produce this increase were a gain of 14.5 per cent in number of customers served and a gain of 7.9 per cent in horsepower connected.

COTTON SUPPLY AND DEMAND

NEW YORK—A well known exporter of cotton says the United States and Canada, together with what Mexico may need from this country, will take 6,000,000 bales out of the current season's crop for spinning needs between this and Sept. 1, 1913. Great Britain will take 4,000,000 more bales, according to the same exporter's estimate. He asks significantly: "From what sources will the rest of the world get its cotton supply?"

The well-sustained manner in which the recovery of prices since Friday last is held in the exchanges and throughout the South is an indication that values are by no means laxly regarded whether at home or abroad. Regardless of eventualities in southeastern Europe, which neither spins nor grows cotton and is not gifted with large purchasing power, the industrial districts will require for spinning and other consumption fully as much as last year, when 20,777,000 bales were consumed.

NEW YORK CURB

REMEDY PROPOSED FOR THE ANNUAL SHORTAGE OF CARS

NEW YORK—A middle western railroad officer says the annual car shortage can only be remedied in greater part by a more effective demurrage code. The present demurrage rate charged in most states has but little deterrent effect and does not work out properly so far as the release of cars is concerned.

All carriers have a set of demurrage rules and the rates thereunder usually amount to $1 per car per day, but there is no limit specified as to the time a car may be detained. One of the first reforms, in this officer's opinion, to be made in the existing set of rules should be a stipulation of the time a car may be detained, with the provision that regular storage rates be imposed after such time expires. Under such a system much of the time now lost by detention of cars would be avoided, reaching as it would, directly, that class of consignees who are not in sympathy with shippers in bringing about a prompt release of cars and who are not affected by the present demurrage charge.

It would discourage and ultimately wipe out that class of shippers who fall back upon the railways for storing facilities and it would be more equitable than proposed system of graduated demurrage charges of $1, $1.50, $2 and $2.50 imposed after the lapse of certain intervals because it would give to the carrier an amount more nearly approaching what he would receive for the storage of the same goods in warehouses.

Investigation on the part of railroads throughout the country has revealed the questionable attitude of many shippers. Cars containing machinery, building material and other hardly perishable goods have been known to be kept upon sidings for from six to eight weeks and even longer and in some instances no efforts of the railroads to have them store these articles in warehouses proved of avail. Such a state of affairs makes itself felt very severely when a large movement of traffic, such as the crops, sets in.

In the vicinity of large cities as many as 500 or 600 cars can be counted on sidings, held up because of the disposition of the shipper's consignee not to unload promptly upon arrival or within the free time of 48 hours.

A recent round-up of the car situation by Canadian transportation interests revealed the fact that over 7000 loaded cars were practically in use as storage houses between Edmonton and Vancouver alone, over 100 cars were held on sidings for over two months, and in one case at another point 150 cars were waiting to be released for upward of 40 days. And the explanation is that merchants would rather pay the demurrage rates each day than place goods in storage houses or build their own facilities.

OUTLOOK GOOD ON ALL GRADES FOR SUSTAINED WOOL VALUES

Legislative Action Foreseen by Dealers, but the Most Important Influence Is the Statistical Situation and Its Relation to the Unusual Activity of the Mills

Business halts somewhat in the wool market, as in several other lines of trade, pending the outcome of the national election, but there is less hesitancy this year than is usually observed at similar periods.

It is practically settled, and so accepted, that revision of the wool schedule of the tariff is bound to take place in the new Congress, so that it makes little difference on that score which party is successful. Statistically the wool market is in fairly good condition to stand the transition, and it would surprise few of those who are most interested in the prospect if prices were to advance before shearing time, even if they recede again in the spring before the 1913 clips are bought in domestic primary markets.

Immediate effect of the election may be simply confirmation of what many of the wool dealers expect, and it presumably can have only a temporary influence, inasmuch as the larger and far more potent factor in quotations for the balance of the year will be the practical bearing of available supplies upon the demand for woolen mill products. With continued manufacturing activity there seems likely to be a decided shortage in domestic clips.

On this account preparations have been made by many mill men to go ahead confidently, as far as the 1913 output is concerned, and heavy buying, which means sustained prices, is looked for—in fact, is almost assured by the inquiries wool merchants have received and the tentative orders that figure in market prospects.

Current transactions are of considerable volume, although keeping close to the line of actual immediate requirements in most cases. During the past fortnight, however, there have been some evidences of a little speculative buying to forestall an advance in values and a number of option deals are said to be pending.

It is conceded that shipments of domestic wool have come forward from growing sections in large volume and have been readily sold, depleting the available supply more than ordinarily, so that the question of maintaining values is giving the dealers little concern, the buyer being the party most interested in the trend of prices at the present time.

Absolutely no bearish influences are expected from the foreign market. New Australian and Argentine wools are higher this season than they were a year ago and there seems to be no prospect of any change, as far as this year's clips are concerned. Wools suitable for American use appear also to be in light supply, and importations consequently are likely to be firm. This gives added strength to domestic fleeces and holders are encouraged by the prospects of sustained prices in competitive lines.

On actual sales of wool in this market no changes in quotations are reported. For Ohio XX and above, the quotation is steady at 31@32c, and fine washed delaine holds at 34@35c, with other grades holding proportionately. Territory clips are on the scoured basis of 65@67c for fine staple, 62@64c for half blood, 57@58c for three eighths and 53@55c for quarter. Clothing territories bring 60@62c, scoured basis, for fine, and 57@58c for fine medium.

In all apparel lines there is a good seasonable demand, and the market could hardly be better from the manufacturers' and jobbers' point of view, a ready sale for both worsteds and woolens having characterized transactions of the past month or two. Underwear is wanted faster than it can be furnished and mills are behind on orders. In fact the call for textiles of all kinds produced from wool is more active than at any previous time in several years.

STEEL REPORTS GAIN OF NEARLY FIVE MILLIONS

NEW YORK—The Steel Corporation's report for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1912, shows total net earnings of $30,063,512, after deducting all expenses incident to operation, including those for ordinary repairs and maintenance of plants and interest on bonds and fixed charges of subsidiary companies.

The increase of nearly $5,000,000 in net earnings of the Steel Corporation for the quarter ended with September was in line with predictions made here for the last several weeks. Estimates by Wall street interests, however, placed the earnings between $29,000,000 and $32,000,000. The showing of $30,063,512 is regarded with satisfaction, as it leaves a surplus for the quarter after both preferred and common dividends, depreciation, bond interest, etc., of $2,434,801.

The increase shown by the third quarter was not as large by a little over $2,000,000 as that shown by the second quarter over the first, although orders and shipments were larger in the third quarter. The low-priced material taken last fall and this spring ran well into the third quarter, but with the beginning of the current month the greater part of the cheaper products have been made and shipped. From Oct. 1, therefore, earnings show a substantial increase which will undoubtedly last through the next year.

In the second quarter the Steel Corporation charged off for depreciation and reserve and sinking funds of subsidiary companies $5,075,119, while during the third quarter this was increased by nearly $2,500,000, making the total depreciation charges, etc., for the quarter just reported, $7,658,049. Had depreciation charges for the third quarter been the same as for the second the earnings for the quarter ended with September would have been between $32,000,000 and $33,000,000.

Total net earnings for the first three quarters of 1912 were $72,992,740, compared with $81,150,448 for the first three quarters of 1911. This shrinkage is due, of course, to the lower prices obtained for products sold in the first half of this year.

The decrease of about $400,000 in earnings for September over August can be explained in different ways. One explanation is that there was a car shortage in September which was not notable in the previous month and crops required more cars in September than during the previous month. Hence shipments would necessarily fall off. Labor was scarce also in September and this would have its effect.

For the last quarter of the year it is reasonably certain that the corporation will show net earnings of between $34,000,000 and $35,000,000, which will show both preferred and common dividends earned with a surplus.

EQUIPMENT INQUIRIES

CHICAGO—Atchison, 'Frisco and Chicago & North Western are reported to be in the market for additional equipment.

SAYS TALK OF AN ADVANCE IN SHOE PRICES PREMATURE

New England Shoe & Leather Association Secretary Says Increase Will Come but Not Immediately

HIDE IMPORTS BIG

Commenting on the statement, emanating from the tanners' convention in Chicago, predicting a further increase in the price of shoes, Secretary Anderson of the New England Shoe and Leather Association says:

"It is unfortunate that tanners just at this time should further agitate the public mind by talking of another price advance in shoes coming so soon after the general increase of 15 cents or 20 cents a pair made a month or so ago. The fact of the matter is, however, that there will have to be a further increase, but it probably will not come until the beginning of the next run at the factories, or perhaps six months hence. Manufacturers are pretty well covered with leather for the present run and for such stocks as they bought a month ago they paid less than current quotations.

"Leather sold at prices now prevailing show a good profit on the hides used to make it and purchased, of course, several months ago. Tanning is at best a rather slow process. I can, however, make the statement on the best of authority that leather sold at today's market shows a loss based on present quotations for hides. In other words, there must be next year an advance in leather and shoe prices commensurate with the steady rise in hide quotations.

"Importations of hides are nearly 50 per cent ahead of last year in quantity and close to 100 per cent greater in value, but still the hide market works upward. The high-priced hide phenomenon is world wide. Hides from Argentina are costing almost as much, after transportation charges are paid, as our own domestic hides. Nevertheless, we are going to be more and more dependent upon those South American countries for our cattle and hide supply. The prospect of materially increasing the number of cattle in this country is not very bright. Grazing lands have given place to wheat lands, and the same process is going on in Canada.

"The deplorable fact is that Boston and New England has such poor steamship facilities with South American countries. Such connections would be of great benefit to our tanners and manufacturers, not only by bringing valuable sources of supply to our door, but also in offering extensive fields for other classes of business development. Our manufacturers don't seem to have realized these possibilities. St. Louis has been getting the jump on us. Agents have gone to South America from St. Louis not only to look over the field, but to bring back orders."

AN EFFORT TO SAVE THE CALVES

NEW YORK—The national live stock exchange plans action to solve the cattle shortage problem. The first step will be an appeal to Congress asking government regulation of the slaughtering of calves. A bill proposes the forbidding of shipping or transporting by common carrier of any live calf unaccompanied by its mother unless it be six weeks old or over. The secretary of agriculture may permit shipments between the age of three and six weeks when the entire time consumed is less than twelve hours, with emergency shipments of calves less than six weeks old. Violation is a misdemeanor, with fine of between $20 and $50 for each calf.

Speaking at the convention of the exchange in Portland, Ore. lately, Horace H. Fletcher of Indianapolis, pointed out that in 1910, of 20,000,000 cattle of all kinds slaughtered, 4,600,000 or more than 20 per cent were calves. Compared with 1900, slaughtering of calves increased seven-fold.

DIVIDENDS

The directors of the Manomet mills declared the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable Nov. 5 to stock of record Oct. 29.

The directors of the Nonquitt Spinning Company have declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent, payable Nov. 5 to stock of record Oct. 29.

The U. S. Steel Corporation has declared the regular quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent on its preferred stock and 1¼ per cent on its common stock.

CRUDE RUBBER PRICES

NEW YORK—Crude rubber is weak. High-grade Para is quoted at $1.05@6, with no indication of any heavy buying. Best grades of plantation rubber are quoted at $1.32½. Present price of Para represents a decline of 20 cents from high of the year, while plantation rubber is off 40 cents from top figure. Unusually heavy auction of plantations in London market is one of principal reasons for present heaviness

RESULT OF DECLINE ON NEW YORK AND BOSTON EXCHANGES

The liquidation of securities which has now been in progress for nearly a month—caused by a combination of political uncertainty, fear of high money and Balkan war scare—has already produced some severe losses in the prices of the active stocks on the New York and Boston stock exchanges. On the New York board Canadian Pacific has been the biggest sufferer with a net loss of 22⅝ points, although this is not, of course, a fair criterion by which to judge the rest of the list where the decline has been much less marked. Of the other active New York stocks Amalgamated shows the greatest loss, from 90⅞ to 82½, 8⅜ points, losses in other stocks varying between this and but a quarter of a point in the case of Lehigh Valley.

In Boston the copper stocks have been the weakest features, not on account of any great amount of liquidation, but because bids have as a rule been scarce. Calumet & Hecla has declined 59 points this month, but Lake has been relatively the weakest stock with net decline of 7⅞ points, or from 35½ to 27⅝.

PITTSBURGH COAL MARKET ACTIVE

PITTSBURGH—Many coal buyers are seeking to place round lots for forward delivery. With car supply restricted to less than 50 per cent, and a rapidly broadening market, and local demand, operators hesitate to accept new tonnage at any price except subject to restriction.

Some quotations on ¾-inch screened coal have gone as high as $1.75, ranging from $1.60 up. There have been no sales reported at the higher figure. Demand for slack is the heaviest in years, and it is likely that it will move up within the present week in price to $1.30 or $1.35 as a maximum.

NAVAL STORES

NEW YORK—Turpentine quiet, tone of the market easier in sympathy with Savannah and quotations are reduced to 42@42½ ex-yard.

Rosin—The general market is quiet with only a limited routine business in progress and revised quotations show a lower range for most descriptions. The New York Commercial quotes:

Common $6.50, Gen Sam E $6.60, graded B $6.75, D $6.85, E $6.90, F $6.95, G $7, H $7.05, I $7.05, K $7.20, M $7.60, N $8, WG $8.50, WW $8.85.

Tar and pitch—Jobbing parcels are in moderate demand, and quotations continue steady at $5.75 for tar and $4@4.25 for pitch.

SAVANNAH—Spirits turpentine firm at 39c. Sales 442, receipts 697, exports 371, stock 29,630. Rosins firm. Sales 2420, receipts 3977, exports 1038, stock 1,106,689. Prices: WW $8.55, WG $8.30, N $7.70, M $6.95, K $6.35, I $6.30, H $6.27½, G $6.35, F $6.25, E $6.20, D $6.15, B $6.10.

WILMINGTON — Rosin easy; good $5.95. Spirits easy, machine 38c. Tar easy at $2; turpentine hard $3.25, soft $4.25, virgin $4.25.

LIVERPOOL—Turpentine spirits 31s 9d. Rosin, common, 16s 3d.

LONDON—Turpentine quiet at 30s 3d. Rosin, American standard, quiet at 16s 4½d. Rosin, American fine, quiet at 21s.

COMMONWEALTH-EDISON

CHICAGO—President Insull says there is no prospect for an increase in Commonwealth-Edison's dividend while the service rates are being regulated by the city. A director says earnings would justify an increase in dividend rate to 8 per cent and that this rate may be established in a year.

THE SUGAR MARKET

NEW YORK—Domestic refined and spot raw markets unchanged; London beets quiet, October 9s 4½d, up ¾d; November and May unchanged at 9s 3¾d and 9s 9¾d, respectively.

ADVANCE IN STEEL PRICES

PITTSBURGH—As a result of the heavy demand and the higher production cost forged steel car axles have been advanced $2 a ton from $1.50 to $1.55, the old quotations, to $1.60@1.65.

HUDSON BAY ROAD TO BE COMPLETED WITHIN TWO YEARS

Another Outlet for Western Grain Will Be Established When New Railway Has Been Finished

PROBABLE TERMINUS

NEW YORK—The Hudson Bay railway will be an established proposition in about two years, if the estimates made by engineers are not upset by delay in obtaining construction material as wanted and by unusual weather conditions. Completion of this line will mean the establishment of another more or less practical outlet for western grain.

The Dominion government has let a contract covering the last section of the railroad consisting of about 165 miles of line from Split lake to Port Nelson. There seems still to be some uncertainty as to whether Ft. Churchill or Port Nelson will be chosen as the terminus. A line to the latter has the advantage of being the shorter of the two and consequently the cheaper from a construction point of view, the territory through which the lines have been tentatively projected being very much the same, but the former is believed to be a better harbor.

Just what the future of the Hudson bay line will be as a transportation line, it is difficult to forecast. A number of investigations have been made, and opinions differ rather widely as to the ultimate practicability of the proposition. The Hudson bay route and the outlying straits will be open to navigation perhaps five months of the year, or less if the winter season is a protracted one as is often the case; but the open season occurs at a time when there is no grain to move, thus necessitating the storage of grain for several months at the heads of the Great lakes or at Port Nelson, the plan which is now in operation with regard to lake shipping, but which was sought to be remedied in greater part by the construction of the line to Hudson bay.

To make the line under construction practical and profitable, it is the opinion of engineers, large grain elevators will have to be erected at the terminal port and the grain stored for shipment during the following summer, for the vast bulk of grain does not begin to move until the latter part of October, the month in which Hudson bay begins to freeze over. But the plan of erecting storage elevators will be of some benefit to the farmers who are anxious to secure every possible outlet, though it will not make of the line the valuable outlet it was planned to establish.

It is generally conceded by those who have studied the proposition that the road will not accomplish all that its friends claim for it. The latter point out that vessels to the terminal point from Great Britain will not only have to navigate without the established safeguards to be found over all established water routes, but that the insurance rates will be almost prohibitive. They contrast the prospective situation in those untraveled northern waters with the actual conditions prevailing in the St. Lawrence river where very high insurance rates obtain because wrecks are of frequent occurrence there despite the fact that the route is comparatively well lighted and equipped with signaling apparatus and the waterway in recent years has been deepened and straightened.

STANDARDIZATION OF EQUIPMENT

An official of one of the largest car manufacturing establishments in the United States says: "Only an equipment manufacturing company official can realize the huge annual waste which the railroads of the United States force upon themselves because of the absence of standardized rolling stock. There are almost as many different designs of freight and passenger cars as there are railroads in the country. In the main the insistence by railroads up on their particular design is a tribute to the vanity of their engineers. Few of the distinctions are fundamental, but they are complicated and numerous enough to make anything like standardized rolling stock an impossibility.

"Figures which we have had compiled show very conclusively that the railroads of the United States are paying $14,000,000 to $15,000,000 more yearly for rolling stock than they would if a standard type had been universally adopted. There is standard gauge. Why not have the car itself standard? This $14,000,000, moreover, represents the cost of 14,000 freight cars, or 7 per cent or 8 per cent of the total number ordered in a year of normal business."

WORLD'S COTTON CONSUMPTION

WASHINGTON—For year ending Aug. 31, 1912, bureau of the census makes consumption of cotton 20,777,000 bales; production of growth of 1911 of 22,297,000 bales, leaving a surplus of production amounting to 1,520,000 bales. In consumption of the quantity mentioned above, there were engaged 140,954,000 spindles, or an average of 6.8 spindles for each bale of cotton consumed, or 73 pounds a spindle.

BIG GAINS BY WESTERN ROADS IN MOVEMENT OF FREIGHT

Only Handicap to Traffic Now Experienced Is a Lack of Equipment—An Enormous Volume of Grain and Merchandise Tonnage Is Handled

CHICAGO—Western railroads continue to show steady gains in the movement of freight and were it not for the prospect of a severe car shortage a little later on there would be little traffic managers could complain of as far as the volume of business is concerned. While the grain movement is heavy and absorbs a vast amount of rolling stock and creates a shortage of box cars, there is also an enormous tonnage of other kinds of freight, especially that of a high revenue character. Officials say there is no let-up to the demands of shippers of all kinds of goods and they are looking for none, as manufacturing is going on extensively in every direction. The best authorities are of the opinion that the uplift in general business has come to stay for an indefinite period.

Banking conditions all over the West are satisfactory and officials are in an optimistic frame of mind. No condition has been developed which would indicate anything of an unfavorable nature in the business structure. The borrowing demand is of large proportions, but of a character reflecting stability of purpose and devoid of speculative tendencies. Bankers are frowning on anything of a nature which might tend to bring a speculative aspect into the situation, and have so far prevented anything of the sort. Loans are closely scrutinized, but rates are in no case drastic. Business enterprises are receiving the best attention from the bankers and rates are in no way prohibitive to legitimate expansion.

The movement of grain keeps up and is limited to the car supply in many sections of the country. In the Southwest, while liberal, it was not quite as heavy as heretofore, but this is not unusual as it is about time for shipments to diminish for a time. In other sections, particularly in the Northwest and in Canada, the movement is enormous. The railroads will have all the grain tonnage they can handle this year, and a good portion of next, according to the closest observers, as farmers are getting a good price, and are eager to market their products. The outlook for corn is decidedly bright, as the weather of late has been of the best for drying and cutting has progressed rapidly. There is still every indication of bumper crops and with normal cold weather in a few weeks the grain is in shape to dry out in good shape. This will mean a heavy additional tonnage for the railroads and is expected to tax their capacity as well as increase revenues.

The merchandise trade is particularly active at this time and visiting buyers have arrived at the largest distributing points in large numbers. This indicates that stocks have not been replenished to any degree and that the buying power is increasing. Dry goods merchants in all sections of the West are doing an enormous business, both wholesale and retail and the demand for seasonablee goods is extraordinary. Purchases greatly exceed those of recent years at this time. Purchases for future delivery are going on conservatively and aggregate a heavy volume. This is not only true of dry goods trade but includes the clothing, shoes, and most other lines which come under the head of standard commodities.

There is little change in the general aspect of the western iron and steel trade. Most of the mills are sold six months ahead and prices are firmly held, but new business is coming in at a steady pace which indicates that the mills will work at full capacity during the greater part of the coming year, if not all. There is an enormous demand on the part of the railroads, the car manufacturers and users of structual material. All structural material, as well as steel bars bring full prices, and the mills are sold so far ahead that they are independent about taking new business. There is a large tonnage going to the eastern mills on account of the filled-up condition of the western producers.

The coal business is active and up to the full capacity of the railroads to handle. There is a shortage of cars on most of the big coal roads, which is giving the trade some anxiety.

Railroads operating eastward from Chicago and St. Louis continue to show gains in tonnage, the aggregate being in the neighborhood of 10 per cent above a year ago. The car situation is one of the big factors in determining the volume of business and it is found that the amount of business pressing for shipment is much heavier than the roads can handle promptly, owing to the lack of various kinds of rolling stock.

Business activity all over the territory of these roads remains at a high pitch and is expected to continue, as orders for all manufactured product fails to diminish. Westbound tonnage is heavy and ahead of a year ago in nearly all classifications. Officials of Southern roads say business is heavy and steadily gaining.

MISSOURI ZINC AND LEAD SALES

JOPLIN, Mo.—Prices of zinc sulphide ore in the Joplin camp during the past week were unchanged from last week, $61 high, the base being $54 to $58 per ton of 60 per cent zinc. Zinc silicate sold unchanged on a base of $31 to $34 per ton of 40 per cent zinc. The average price, all grades of zinc, was $54.54 per ton.

Lead sold on a base of $63 to $64 per ton of 80 per cent metal contents. The average price, all grades, of lead was $63.90 per ton.

Increased demand the past three weeks strengthened the market toward the close 50 cents to $1 per ton on a few lots of zinc ore. Of the reserve stock, about one half is sold ahead, while the remainder is held for higher prices. Indications point to a further firming of the market this week, unless demand should relax.

Shipments are running high and the outputting continues heavy. A steady continuation of prices around $50 to $60 will further increase the output before this latitude will feel the encroachment of winter.

COTTON CROP OF LOUISIANA

BATON ROUGE, La.—State board of agriculture estimates the cotton crop at about 375,000 bales, and not above 400,000 bales. Last year's crop of 299,000 running bales was the highest since 1907, when the state produced 480,000 bales.

Louisiana's other crop returns for the season show that different crops and different localities have been much handicapped by the spring floods. In Richland parish 6000 out of 50,000 acres were subjected to overflow, after which the crop did not have enough time to mature. Otherwise yields were excellent. The uplands in many cases made the best crops in several years.

Rice conditions have improved and good yields are expected. A light tonnage in sugar cane is certain.

CHICAGO HOG MARKET LOWER

CHICAGO—Packers' withdrawal from the hog market has resulted in the fall of $1 per 100 pounds in a week and $1.25 to $1.50 from crest of high prices of a month ago.

THREE ELECTIONS WITHIN SIX MONTHS ARE DUE FOR LONDON

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Unlike the municipalities of the provinces, London elects its government but once in three years. During the next six months not only will the London county council have to be re-elected, but the boards of guardians and the metropolitan borough councils as well.

It is often felt that if these elections took place at greater intervals of time from each other, they would be more effective in reminding the Londoner that the government of the capital is a matter of personal interest and responsibility with him. The fact that the provincial elections take place once a year serves to stimulate a kind of local patriotism which infuses vitality into the administration.

The government of London is now composed of organized and efficient bodies, some of which are elective like the London county council, and some of which are selected like the Metropolitan asylums board, which together with the Metropolitan water board and the port of London authority the members of both of which are also selected, are bodies peculiar to London.

The difficult problem of the government of London was only really taken in hand in the year 1888. Before that date the city corporation was in existence, but the rest of London was governed in the same way as a rural area. The governing bodies were the Metropolitan board of works, the justices in quarter sessions and the parish vestries. The local government act, which became law in 1888, created the county councils, and made London a county thus giving its administration into the hands of the London county council. It was in 1900 that the borough councils of London were formed, and they superseded the old vestries. The borough councils are the local sanitary authorities for their respective areas, and they also have the control of the streets and lighting.

The Metropolitan water board is not only responsible for the area included in the county of London, but for a much larger area, and it is conceded that the water of London is probably the purest of any great city in the world. At one time the problem of the supply was so great that the idea was entertained of obtaining water from Wales, an extraordinarily expensive scheme. The water board has made the discovery, however, that the great secret of obtaining pure soft water is to store it, and that if water only stands long enough all impurities and lime sink to the bottom. For the purpose of storing water huge reservoirs have been built and are still being built. The solution of London's water problem has the advantage of also providing for the eventuality of a water famine.

FRENCH SPORTING DICTIONARY DECLARED TO BE GREAT NEED

(Special to the Monitor)

PARIS, France—The president of the Academie des Sports, Hebrard de Villeneuve, is the initiator of the idea of compiling a French dictionary of sporting terms, of which he declares the sporting world to be in great need.

Much confusion, he says, is created by the present non-recognition by the intitut of even the most commonly used sporting terms. For instance with regard to fencing, a sport most essentially French, there are many expressions, such as "un contre," "un redoublement," "un liement," "une opposition," "un battement," which do not even appear in Larousse. Many other sporting expressions and terms are not defined in any existing French dictionary, with the result that considerable confusion is created by their frequent misuse, most of them having been adopted through necessity without being properly understood.

The immense increase of the national interest in sport and athletics gives an importance to this question which it has never hitherto possessed in France. Hebrard de Villeneuve proposes that the members of the Academie des Sports should divide themselves into 10 subcommittees, each dealing with a specific branch of sport. By this means it will be possible to attain some accuracy and to give some authoritative meaning to the various terms now in use.

AUSTRIANS SEEK LOCALIZATION OF BALKAN CONFLICT

(Special to the Monitor)

VIENNA, Austria—The situation in the Balkans was the principal topic engaging the attention of the members of the delegation assembled for the debate on the second reading of the estimates of the ministry for foreign affairs. The speakers were unanimous in expressing the hope that, the powers being unable to prevent an outbreak of hostilities, they would succeed in localizing the conflict.

The utmost confidence in Count Berchtold was expressed by Prince zu Schwarzenberg on behalf of the Conservatives, who, he said, were convinced that the foreign minister would follow the policy of maintaining peace and improving the conditions of the Christian population in Turkey while protecting Austro-Hungarian interests.

Count Berchtold referred to the Russian mobilization, and explained that no anxiety need be felt on the subject since arrangements for the experiment had been made as long ago as last spring, and he pointed out as a further guarantee of the peaceful aims of Russia that she had just agreed to co-operate with Austria.

BULGARIAN CREDIT AIDED BY RUSSIA

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany—According to information received by the Frankfurter Zeitung from Sofia, the Russian State Bank has opened a credit of f.25,000,000 with foreign banks on behalf of the Bulgarian National Bank.

It has been generally considered that the lowness of the funds of the Balkan states would be one of the principal factors in restraining warlike operations, and the recent attempt made by Bulgaria to borrow f.5,000,000 in Paris illustrates the financial position of the most important of the states involved. The money was, however, not forthcoming owing to the request of M. Poincare that no monetary assistance should be afforded by France.

FIVE EVENTS IN LONDON HISTORY TO BE DEPICTED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—At the lord mayor's show five events in the history of London are to be depicted, the pictures in the royal exchange being taken as a basis. The first group will be Frank O. Salisbury's picture, King Alfred riding to inspect the rebuilding of the city walls in 880 A. D. William the Conqueror will be shown in the second group, granting the city its first charter.

In the third group Lord Mayor Sir Henry Picard will be shown on his way to Vintners hall with the five kings he entertained there in 1363. The kings were those of England, Scotland, France, Denmark and Cyprus.

The fourth group is to illustrate the opening of the royal exchange in 1570 by Queen Elizabeth. The incident chosen will be the lord mayor and the city dignitaries on their way to Temple Bar to greet the Queen. In the fifth, and last group, Charles I. and his court will be represented riding to the Guildhall in the year 1641.

CHERBOURG, France—The members of the Southampton town council were the guests of the Cherbourg municipality recently. The French seaport welcomed the visitors with great cordiality, and festivities were held in their honor. A garden fete and concert on the night of their arrival was followed on the succeeding day by a visit to the old and historic castle of Tourlaville, and by an official luncheon at the Mairie.

The prefect of the Manche department, the local admirals and generals, and the civil authorities were present, and friendly speeches were made on both sides. Every night the town was illuminated and the British and French flags flew over many of the buildings.

CIVIC LEADERS OF AUSTRIA VISITING LONDON AS GUESTS OF LORD MAYOR AND ALDERMEN

Councilors From Vienna, Prague and Ischl Return Visit Made by Members of English City Corporation

RECEIVED IN STATE

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—Members of the municipal councils of Vienna, Prague and Ischl arrived in London recently as guests of the city corporation. They were met at Charing Cross station by the lord mayor and sheriffs, who attended in state.

The visitors included Dr. Josef Neumayer, burgermeister of Vienna, Herr Franz Leithner, burgermeister of Ischl, and Dr. Karel Gros, mayor of Prague and member of the Bohemian Diet, who are here making a return visit to the corporation of the city of London, members of which visited the Austrian capital not long ago.

The first day of their visit was spent in visiting a number of places of interest, escorted by members of the city corporation. The party proceeded in a procession of about 30 carriages which attracted considerable attention along the route traversed through the city to the Tower bridge. They then visited the Tower where the armory, the crown jewels and other items of interest were inspected. It had been hoped that the party could have paid a visit to the mint, but this was rendered impossible owing to a very stringent regulation which precludes the possibility of more than six persons being admitted at one time.

The visitors were subsequently entertained to luncheon at the Leathersellers' hall, at the conclusion of which the usual speeches were made. In the afternoon the visitors were present at a reception held at the Austro-Hungarian embassy, and a dinner with the masters and wardens of the Vintners' Company brought a very busy day to a close. The program arranged for their entertainment included visits to St. Paul's Cathedral, the city markets and a state dinner at the Guildhall, presided over by the lord mayor. Before leaving arrangements were made for the visitors to travel to Windsor and Burnham Beeches.

RUSKIN LETTER IS NOW RECALLED

(Special to the Monitor)

GLASGOW, Scotland—The Scott letter which has been presented to the University court of Glasgow by Lord Rosebery is in strong contrast with a letter written by Ruskin to the undergraduates of Glasgow University.

Ruskin had proclaimed himself to be "the stauchest Conservative in the British Isles," adding, however, that his views on the land question were not such as would be sanctioned by any Conservative club. He was asked by the undergraduates to explain his meaning, and he sent them the following letter:

"What in the devil's name have you to do with either Mr. Disraeli or Mr. Gladstone? You are students of the university, and have no more business with politics than you have with rat catching. Had you ever read the words of mine with understanding, you would have known that I care no more for Mr. Disraeli or Mr. Gladstone than for two old bagpipes, but that I hate all Liberalism as I do Beelsebub, and that with Carlyle I stand, we two alone now in England, for God and the Queen."

EXPLORATION OF NEW GUINEA IS CARL LUMHOLTZ PROJECT

(Special to the Monitor)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway—A new scheme for the exploration of New Guinea, the second largest island in the world, which has been formulated by Carl Lumholtz was laid before the Geographical Society here recently.

M. Lumholtz is a well known explorer having thrice conducted expeditions into Mexico, where he lived amongst the Indian tribes for a considerable time sharing their lives to some extent in order to understand their ways. He states that the expedition to New Guinea should set out from Batavia and go direct to Borneo. Three or four months would be spent in Borneo in getting acquainted with the country, and in choosing 60 or 70 men to form part of the exploring party. Reliable carriers could be selected from the Dajak.

The country which M. Lumholtz has determined to investigate lies on the east side of the Wilhelmina summit discovered by the Dutch explorer M. Lorentz. He hopes to find a companion who can draw maps, take photographs and develop them, and prepare films for cinematography. Two other Norwegian assistants would be necessary on the expedition to make biological and botanical studies. The expedition would leave Europe before the end of 1912, and is expected to last for a year and a half.

At the close of the lecture the plan of M. Lumholtz was supported by the highest recommendations from four professors of the university and the opinion was generally expressed that no one could be in a better position to prepare himself for conducting such an arduous task as an expedition into New Guinea. M. Lumholtz would never hesitate to encounter difficulties when the acquiring of valuable scientific specimens was in question.

PEKING CONSIDERS OPIUM BURNING

(Special to the Monitor)

SHANGHAI, China—Sir E. D. H. Fraser, the British consul-general who was sent to Anking to demand compensation for the burning of the Indian opium chests, has returned to Shanghai. No communication has been issued, but the whole of the opium question has been referred to Peking.

A detailed account of the Anking incident states that not only was the opium burned but that the Tutu caused placards to be printed and distributed in the city threatening any one cultivating opium with the extreme penalty of the law. From other sources it is learned that opium is being extensively cultivated in North Anhui, in spite of all prohibitions.

CORRUGATED SHIP TYPE ADVOCATED

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—An interesting lecture was delivered recently at the Royal United Service Institution by Capt. G. S. MacIlwaine, R. N. The subject was "The Corrugated Ship." Captain MacIlwaine maintains that when the advantages of this design are appreciated there will be a revolution in naval architecture which will affect every type of vessel including merchant vessels, yachts, lifeboats, canal and river craft.

LORD SHAFTESBURY HONORED

LONDON—A wreath was placed on the memorial raised to Lord Shaftesbury by the Ragged School Union in Westminster abbey. Though Lord Shaftesbury was not actually the founder of this philanthropic institution, he was, however, the mainstay of it. For 37 years he was chairman of the union, during which period 300,000 children passed through the school.

BANISTER FLETCHER TALKS ON VALUE OF ARCHITECTURE

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON—In the course of a lecture on medieval architecture delivered at the Victoria and Albert museum, Banister Fletcher, F. R. I. B. A., dwelt particularly on the value of possessing a knowledge of the architectural history of Europe.

Architecture is a visible exponent of civilization uniting and embracing all the other arts, and all modern design is founded mainly upon the old models, though made to conform to present day requirements.

He pointed out that architecture was the basis of all design and therefore a knowledge of it was necessary to all designers and students of art, and indeed to the whole community. No novelist or author could set up a historical novel without reference to the buildings his characters had inhabited. The journalist and the photographer alike required this knowledge.

The teaching profession was realizing more every day that to make history interesting the student should be taught not only what men did, but what they had constructed, not only what battles they fought but amongst what surroundings they fought them, what buildings they had lived in, and, moreover, what churches they had built. Travel cannot be appreciated without the knowledge of architectural history for to travel without it, was like having a book open before you that you had not the ability to read.

HEAD OF REICHSTAG RESIGNS HIS SEAT

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany—The resignation is announced of Herr Kampf, the president of the Reichstag, from the first Berlin parliamentary division.

The seat which the resignation of Herr Kampf leaves vacant represents the wealthiest section of the city of Berlin; the division contains the imperial palace, the Reichstag buildings, and the government offices.

In January last the seat was only prevented from falling into the hands of the Socialist candidate, Herr Duwell, by eight votes. Herr Kampf, who was elected, is a member of the Radical party. At the general election the parties of the right decided to give him their vote solely to prevent a Socialist victory.

CANDLE-NUT OIL IS NEW INDUSTRY IN QUEENSLAND

(Special to the Monitor)

BRISBANE, Q., Aus.—A new industry started in the Cairns district is the production of lubricating oils and grease from candle-nut oil and cotton-seed oil. At Gossypium park a series of experiments have been conducted, which ended in the production of a number of samples of what was called Oleum Porum. The samples ranged from the heaviest machine oil to the lightest sewing machine oil. The by-products can be converted into an excellent axle grease. The candle-nut grows extensively in the scrub.

OBEDIENCE AND AUTHORITY

THE "Autobiography of an Individualist," just concluded in the Atlantic, is the story of a man, James O. Fagan, who was for upward of a quarter of a century a switchman on a railroad near Boston. He sets forth the conditions which he declares are tending to make railroad service less efficient than it should be. He says that the courts adjusting a case of an engineer who ran his train too fast around a curve worked it out that if there had been no curve there would have been no trouble. Mr. Fagan sees that if there had been obedience to rule and to authority there would have been no trouble.

He says that in the old days the superintendent had absolute authority and if men proved themselves inefficient or in any way untrustworthy he had the power to refuse to employ them or to remove them from their posts. Nowadays organization of labor brings conditions whereby such men are often retained in their places. He says that when the man under whom he worked was displaced for being too old-fashioned in his notions of duty and authority, he had the names of a dozen or more men on his unavailable list. Now, thanks to the seniority rule, practically every man qualifies and the public, seeing the results, blames the management. He cites another case where the superintendent discharged the whole of the train crew concerned in some piece of carelessness whereby the train barely escaped plunging through an open "draw." But the community was roused in the men's favor and one of the directors of the railroad who was looking for political office and incidentally votes had all the men reinstated.

Here is a glimpse of why Mr. Fagan calls his book the record of an individualist. He sees clearly that a man should stand or fall by his own merit and ability and that if he is honest and faithful he will find his level. He even says that as he watched the men with small salaries, as little in some cases as $8 a week, he saw that those who had least and with whom the struggle was sharpest really did the best socially and economically, had the most comfort and brought up their children most successfully. In such cases the whole family did what they could to eke out the income and to economize. This cooperation among them made a little go a long way and Mr. Fagan finds that nothing is better as an aid to character building than such a victory over narrow means. He wonders if the present-day agitator for the increase of material comforts for the laborer is not overlooking needed development of character. He finds that "the rising tide of aggressive industrial assertiveness" is backed up by public opinion, which has, he asserts, no substitute to offer in railroading to take the place of obedience to rules and the exercise of authority.

On First Looking Into Chapman's Homer

Much have I traveled in the realms of gold
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep brow'd Homer ruled as his demesne;
Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:
Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star'd at the Pacific—and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

—John Keats.

A thankful heart is not only the greatest virtue, but the parent of all other virtues.—Cicero.

The Great End of Society

PROPERTY continually tends to become a more vivid idea than right. In the struggle for private accumulation the worth of every human being is overlooked. The importance of every man's progress is forgotten. We must contend for this great idea. They who hold it must spread it around them. The truth must be sounded in the ears of man, that the grand end of society is to place within reach of all its members the means of improvement, of elevation, of the true happiness of man.—Channing.

STOCKHOLM IS CITY CLOSE TO NATURE

STOCKHOLM, by all those acquainted with the city, has always been acknowledged as unrivaled among the capitals of northern Europe. But until recent years the capital of Sweden has remained terra incognita to the ordinary tourist. Stockholm is of ancient foundation and is built on many islands formed by the juncture of the sea and the waters of Lake Malar. Though an old city, Stockholm has not even yet conquered the bed rock on which she stands. The blasting of great masses of this rock takes place to allow of the erection of new buildings on her outskirts.

It is this closeness to nature which is the charm of Stockholm. The clear swift waters which surround Palace and Parliament house flow beneath low arched bridges hewn from native granite. The ferry boats connect the islands and a short run in one of the little pleasure steamers which ply in all directions takes the visitor through harbors where men-of-war lie at anchor, past wharves and busy quays, into peaceful canals leading to some broad stretch of water which one thinks must betoken the nearness of the open sea—but the open sea is reached only after miles and miles of fir and birch covered coast has been left behind.

VASA'S BRIDGE AND THE PALACE, STOCKHOLM

Lake Malar on which the city stands lies on a height above the Baltic, and its overflow (for it can scarcely be called a river) sweeps through the city with a rapid swirl which gives to the atmosphere an indescribable freshness and sweetness. Right in the heart of the city one comes again and again upon fishermen, and moored by the bridges are always boats with old-fashioned round nets worked by a windlass, such as the Swedes have used for generations.

COLLEGE WOMAN, GENTLEWOMAN

THE president of Mt. Holyoke college, founded by Mary Lyon, one of the great pioneers of higher education for women, is Miss Mary E. Wooley. It is told of her that when the question of secret societies at Mt. Holyoke came up a few years ago she took the matter into careful consideration and at last decided that secret societies were not in harmony with the democratic ideas of the founder of the college. The undergraduates submitted with very good grace to their president's leading. Her action and theirs seems worthy of being set forth as example to those who are interested in the arguments pro and con as to secret societies everywhere.

When Miss Wooley was called to the chair at Mt. Holyoke she stated her ideas on education in clear and decisive form. Part of what she said was lately cited by the New York Post and is here reprinted:

"The outlook for the college woman in social work has no horizon, no boundary line. . . . The college must be a school for thought, and produce thinkers, not encyclopedias. . . . Education is made up of social, moral and spiritual factors as well as of intellectual, and it is a one-sided view which does not see them all. The college must stand for sound learning. It must also stand for culture, in the many-sided interpretation of that term. I have a fancy for the old word 'gentlewoman.' It carries with it a hint of the courtliness which springs from a royal heart, of courtesy which is based on unselfishness and consideration of others. A synonym for 'college woman' should be 'gentlewoman.' The sacrifice of gracious womanhood is too high a price to pay for knowledge, a price which is not asked."

Christian Individuality

Christianity is the religion of the brotherhood. It is also the religion of the one man, the one man in and for the brotherhood. It is the religion which throws its arms around "one of these little ones" and which hears angels rejoicing over one sinner who repents. It is the religion which closets each man with God and which beholds each man alone at the judgment. It is the religion which pictures the Son of God standing on the doorstep, saying, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me."—Charles E. Jefferson.

Home Libraries

The growth of the public library to its present day proportions has tended to discourage the private home library. While the public library has come as one of the greatest blessings of our time, yet every home, no matter how humble, should have its own collection of books, says the Home Progress Magazine. To the child a book in the home is worth two in the library. The very fact of its possession enhances its value. Almost any child will read over and over some story that takes its fancy, if the book be at hand. Who has not seen these little treasured volumes literally read to pieces! Again, the boy or girl in school needs books at hand for constant reference. Often the child will slight a subject rather than walk several blocks for the book he would have used had it been at hand.

I learnt to be a brave man constantly —Homer. (Hector in the "Iliad.")

No Vain Endeavor

If a man constantly aspires, is he not elevated? Did ever a man try heroism, magnanimity, truth, sincerity, and find that there was no advantage in them? that it was a vain endeavor?—Thoreau.

CONTINUITY OF GOOD

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

THE teaching of Christian Science of the omnipresence of good, God, is of course the teaching of Christianity. Every child lisping at his mother's knee is told that God is everywhere. The psalmist knew this and cried, "Whither shall I flee from thy presence?" and "if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there." Mrs. Eddy's logical deduction is that if God is everywhere evil is nowhere as an entity. It appears only to mortal consciousness, just as ugly shapes appear to one in the dark, but when light comes are seen to have had no real existence. To see the unreality of evil the light must be admitted. He who continues in darkness, that is, in thinking that is based on a belief of good in evil, continues to see the ugly shapes of sin and sorrow and continues to suffer. There is but one way to be free from sinful belief and its sorry accompaniments of pain and woe, namely to be filled with the knowledge of God, good, that is, of the eternal real.

There are many sayings in the Bible that point directly to this fact which is so hard for mortals to accept—the nothingness of evil, its non-existence in reality. One example is the saying, "The Lord upholdeth all that fall." If God upholds how is it that they fall? In divinely scientific thought the words are seen to say that God really is upholding those that think they fall, or that appear to fall. There is in truth no such thing as a fallen man or woman. Man is the image of God and God's image does not fall. It reflects Him. One of Mrs. Eddy's hymns (Miscellaneous Writings, p. 389) reads:

"Only with mine eye
Can I behold the snare, the pit, the fall."

Suffering humanity is sometimes ready to agree that it is the seeking of its own will which brings about all its shadowy despair. And this is true—for the will of God is perfection, and nothing aside from that exists to be sought by human will. God's decrees cannot change into loss or sin or suffering. God upholds the rightness of all things in His creation. This is the righteousness, the rightness of God, of which the Scriptures are full. But the human will is a false notion that there can be good gained by some other process than through the will of God, and that man can imagine or desire for himself some good which God has not provided. The sincere and simple faith in God comes to the rescue of humanity. This faith of the child is what Jesus enjoined on us; he saw that the child's faith in good and innocence of evil were nearer the reality of man than the adult's faith in or fear of evil. Christian Science requires us to accept frankly what Jesus said, "There is none good save one, that is God," and so to shut out all notion that our own will can possibly bring us any good save as it is lost in the divine will.

To discuss the seeming conditions of error may make error seem real to the learner. It appears a contradiction to talk about what has no existence. Yet we do this a dozen times a day when we speak of any imaginary thing. We might speak to a child of its notion that a ghost was in the room. But this would not mean that we believe in the ghost. We should merely be letting in light on the child's false belief if we said, "There is no ghost, for there is no such thing as a ghost anywhere. You only think you see it." Christian Science says to those who suffer for any seeming cause whatever: There is no cause for sorrow or pain, for God is the only cause, and He cannot cause that which would contradict Him. God is good. He has given His children all good. There is no limitation to the good which God has decreed and actually bestowed on every one of His children. Jesus knew this. He said that God would give the Holy Spirit—the spiritual idea of all things, or the good idea—to those who ask it, as promptly as an earthly father might give bread to his child. In many and many a saying the Bible shows that good is here, ever present, and is to be had for the asking—that is, it is to be realized by faith, for the faith that asks has begun to believe in the presence of good.

The child who thinks that he sees a ghost insists that it is really there. But when the light comes in and shows him that there is no ghost, he is convinced. So when Christian Science has destroyed sickness—by changing the patient's belief from sickness to some understanding of God's harmony and of Life eternal—then he who saw himself as a sick man knows that his sufferings were all the effect of false belief. He knows this not only from the healing, but from the change within him. He now sees spiritual things, which are spiritually discerned, and he knows that God is present, that all is harmony, unchanging good, and that God never gives anything but good to men.

Let those to whom this teaching seems vague and misty honestly accept the statement as fact and proceed to make their thought agree with it. This means clearing out a great deal of error that has been clung to, perhaps unconsciously. To accept the statement that evil is not real and then to hate some one who has injured us is useless. To understand that sickness is a false belief and has no power and then to fear it, is impossible. To cherish any form of self-will, self-pity, selfish desire for the praise of men, and then try to be conformed to the will of God, is a contradictory attitude. As these things are by degrees made clear we learn to give up our errors, and as we let go of them they melt into nothingness. Honestly to affirm that there can be nothing which God did not make wipes out all pride of achievement and it destroys a belief in the existence of evil. It takes away all sense of wrongdoing in others and finally sets us free from self-condemnation.

To see that evil is an error, a false belief about good and happiness, which has deceived, as the Bible says, the whole world, is no longer to condemn oneself or another. It is impossible to keep on sinning when one has seen that sin is a delusion. He who sins does so because he is still under the delusion, still believes that it has some form of good for him. But a step toward the final realization of the actual unreality of all that is unlike God, good, is to affirm this and give the lie to error. Mrs. Eddy tells us reassuringly that "error is a coward before Truth" (Science and Health, p. 368). The statements of Christian Science are truth, as is proved by the healing which follows the reading of the textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures." The truth contained in the book changes the reader's thought from darkness to light and with the knowledge of good as ever-present, divine Love enters with healing on its wings.

NEW OUTLOOK AS REGARDS GEOGRAPHY

ONE recalls that when the Frye geographies came out nearly 20 years ago Dr. Eliot, then president of Harvard, said that they would revolutionize the teaching of geography. It had long been a theory of his that geography could be made one of the most if not the most vital study in the schools. Instead of a mere cataloguing of names and the study of conventional maps which make the child think that all the rivers flowing north must be running up hill, he wanted the physiognomy of the familiar home fields and the conditions of the community which resulted from the peculiarities of the face of nature thereabouts to be taken as the starting point of geography. Young students might thus learn how the natural world has had its influence on the trend of human events.

Furthermore, history was to be related to geography which was indeed to be made a subject of the humanistic sort by emphasizing the study of different peoples. It was to broaden the child's sense of human kinship by making him really familiar with the people living in the antipodes, and it was also to introduce him to literature by the use of descriptive and other passages from great books. It is said that on the publication of the Frye books the geographies that preceded it were all made over, conforming to and improving on this idea of making the study of the earth home of humanity more natural by using things within the experience of the child. Therefore it is small wonder that the visiting geographers who were lately sped on their homeward way by New York, exclaimed, "We did not know that everybody in America was so interested in geography."

This modern movement in geography has been one of the most important in pedagogic progress and it is apparently a distinctly American idea. American geographies are widely used in England and to some extent on the continent, and the sixtieth anniversary of the American Geographical Society was attended by many distinguished people from abroad. The guests traveled 14,000 miles studying the lay of the land on the North American continent and also the face of the people. For in the new geography the earth without its people is no longer a subject of interest. One of the visitors, as reported in the New York Times, spoke of being welcomed everywhere with flowers and fruits and said:

"We noticed the democratic spirit that pervaded not only your public institutions, but also your private life. The relations of employers and employees, chief and subordinates, seem much more cordial than in other countries. Throughout our journey we met great railroad officials who made the trip with us, who spoke in most familiar terms to their employees, and the latter did not always wait to be talked to first. We observed, also, the general cheerfulness and gaiety of your company. Perhaps everybody in the land is not completely satisfied with his condition, but we found so many happy faces that we could not but conclude that many were. A general optimism as regards the future of their country, their state, their county, their city or town was everywhere apparent."

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

Children's Circus

The editors of Our Dumb Animals say that they were all very much cheered by a letter they got awhile ago, enclosing $7 to help in the work they are doing for the protection and comfort of animals. The letter came from two little girls who said:

We raised the money by having a circus in the yard with our two ponies, Nancy and Sally, and our two dogs, Bobo and Buster. We charged 5 cents admission, and sold peanuts and pink lemonade. Every one enjoyed it very much, and two or three who were not able to come, sent us some money. We rode bareback and made the dogs do tricks. I guess we will have another one next summer.

LOWERING TOO HIGH CEILINGS

THERE are many ways of lowering a too high ceiling. The simplest method is to drop the picture rail four or five feet and treat the wall space above the rail as a part of the ceiling. Then you will not be conscious of where frieze space stops and ceiling begins. The eye will travel no higher than the picture rail.

The other method is to have a simple wainscoting three or four feet deep, painted or stained to match the rest of the woodwork and a smaller space between picture rail and ceiling. Wainscotings are very good in any high-ceilinged rooms that have cream or white woodwork, but a wainscoting of dark wood is too formal a finish for any room, except halls and libraries, or living rooms with dark-tinted walls.

The treatment of your ceiling should be determined by the finish of your walls and woodwork. Plain whitewashed ceilings are always safe, but a cream wash is better than white, just as cream paint is better for woodwork than white. White is the most difficult of colors for the amateur decorator. It should be used sparingly.

There is another mistaken ceiling treatment that has been brought about by catalogues of wallpapers, I suppose, continues a writer in the Delineator, and this is to paper ceilings with moire papers, or papers sparkling with stars. Moire hints a watered surface, and why we should want our ceilings to remind us of the rippling of the waves I cannot understand. As for the stars—well, I prefer my stars outside.

Melody of Massenet

Much of Massenet's popularity in America during recent years is due to the performance of his music in Oscar Hammerstein's Manhattan opera house, and one of the best tributes paid to Massenet is written by Mr. Hammerstein, says Current Literature. "It may almost be said of him," Mr. Hammerstein declares, "that he was the last of the great melodists. While other composers of the day were striving for unusual orchestral effects and strange combinations of instruments, he was writing melody. It seems to me that most opera composers write for musicians. Massenet wrote for the public."

A really great name has a way of losing its personal meaning and getting to be simply a label for something done.—H. W. Boynton.

Needs of the Indian Bureau

MUCH of the time of Secretary Fisher of the department of the interior, since his welcome advent to the office, has been spent in probing alleged untoward conditions in outlying regions of the nation, namely in Alaska and Hawaii. In each case he has shown his unusual capacity for getting at the heart of an issue, for providing a way whereby all disputants may be heard fully and fairly, and for doing justice without fear or favor. In Alaska, the devices of selfish claimants to stores of mineral wealth which always should be under federal control have been thwarted. In Hawaii, light has been shed on economic conditions justfying stricter territorial and federal control of corporations that have become too powerful to allow them hereafter to do as they please. Is it asking too much of the secretary of the interior that now, having completed this commendable tour among the outlying territories of the nation, he concentrate the same talents that he has shown in Hawaii in discovering the truth or falsity of charges that are brought against officials of the bureau of Indian affairs, both those in Washington and those on the reservations?

In the first place, judging from the indictments recently framed at the Mohonk conference, there would seem to be need of a square facing of problems of administrative efficiency. Has any Indian commissioner, no matter how able or honest he may be, that sufficient measure of moral or official authority enabling him to do his work well, under the present status of the commissionership? In short, does not the department of interior, at least so far as the Indian bureau is concerned, need reconstruction?

But, even under the present status of the Indian bureau apparently, abuses exist that cannot be altered until motives governing officials in high places are other than personal and partizan and until the government's administrative policies and judicial decrees conform to the ethics of treaty pledges made to the Indians. The Indians' enemies today are stronger than the foes of yesterday because corporate in form and covetous of land, mines, waterpower sites on a scale that the individual white of the past era could not duplicate. There are charges today involving the honor of the nation in its dealing with Indians in Minnesota, Oklahoma and Arizona, which Secretary Fisher should probe right away, while at the same time preparing to make recommendations to Congress as to desirable extension of authority of the Indian bureau so that responsibility hereafter may be placed accurately.

THE wireless station at Arlington, Va., opposite Washington, has a radius of 3000 miles, and Key West and Colon are within its reach. In other words, the capital and the Panama canal are practically within speaking distance.

IT IS safe to say that the order with reference to the special parcels post stamp will go no farther than did the order with reference to the special special delivery stamp.

THE Cubans will hold their election first, and they will seldom have a better opportunity of setting the larger republic a good example.

South American Consolidation

THERE is growing evidence of a tendency of reconciliation throughout South America, of an instinctive move toward a consolidation of interests. Whether this is a spontaneous development or whether it obeys the pressure exerted from the north at the dawn of the Panama canal era, it promises to revise the international status of the southern continent. In Tuesday's Latin-American page in this newspaper there is a report from the Chilean capital quoting two views on South American relations that may be said to represent the old and the new standpoints. Senor Bulnes clings to the tradition of Brazilian friendship as the cornerstone of Chilean international policy; his is the old standpoint of South American balance of power by an alignment based on the rivalry between Brazil and Argentina and the enmity between Chile and Peru. The historian of the war between the latter republics could not perhaps be expected to gauge the interests of the present generation without the historical bias of the contemporaries of the war of the Pacific. The other view is represented by a former minister of Chile in the capital of her foe, Senor Echenique Gandarillas, who advocates the customs union of the five republics of the west coast, Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador and Colombia. It is true that this Zollverein is by no means a new idea, but its revival at a time of decided improvement in the relations between Peru and Bolivia and Peru and Ecuador, and of really substantial prospects for a definite settlement between Peru and Chile, may be said to sum up in concrete form the new tendency of grouping together on a basis of community of interests instead of aligning under stress of antagonism. It was the final reconciliation, some years ago, between the two ancient foes, Argentina and Chile, that heralded this new impulse of consolidation. Given Chile's traditional entente with Brazil, a definite understanding between the latter and Argentina it was thought would complete the South American triple alliance, the much talked of A B C. Brazil and the Argentine actually have come together, yet the triplice of the new world seems to lack cohesion. The fact is that with the removal of their common antagonism to Argentina there appears to be but a slender community of interests between Chile and Brazil, and this could not but react visibly on their relations. It is this that accentuates the anomaly of the situation on the Pacific coast of South America, for the triple alliance must always labor under the weakness of Chile's exposed position in the Pacific and her makeshift entente with Colombia until she makes her peace with Peru. That would not only bring Bolivia and Ecuador, in addition to Peru, within the scope of South American consolidation, but it would inevitably lead to an understanding between Colombia and Peru on the upper Amazon.

There is one tremendous factor for Pan-American progress in this hoped-for peace between Chile and Peru. It is the influence which Peru alone, as the consistent friend of the Americans, can exert on the South American mentality in favor of a better understanding between the United States and the Latin republics.

Pernicious Medical Activity

IT HAS come to the knowledge of this newspaper that medical associations in certain parts of the United States are at present quite actively engaged in campaigning against political candidates known, or believed, to hold views at variance with the bylaws of those organizations, or with the opinions of their members, in regard to the relationship that should exist between the state and any particular school of medicine.

As the information is conveyed to us, the antagonism of the medical associations is directed against these candidates mainly because the latter are, or are presumed to be, interested in a movement that aims to prevent for all time anything in the nature of a working alliance between the government and any special class of medical practitioners. In this movement are associated representatives of practically every branch of healing save one. The medical associations that, according to our information, have entered the field of practical politics, are composed wholly of physicians of this school. It will perhaps be informing to say in passing that this school of medicine is at present in virtual control of all places under the government in which medicine and sanitation are practised, that it is looking and working for an enlargement of its influence, and that fear of dislodgement from its position of absolute and dangerous power, through the opposition of representatives of all the other classes of healers, is the cause of its present pernicious activity.

Those who are striving to keep the government and the state apart in all matters relating to medicine are simply following in the footsteps of others who have fought for years, and are still fighting, in the interest of religion and country, to keep church and state apart. They believe it to be essential, to be vital, to human liberty, health and happiness, that the conscience of the individual shall be as unfettered in the one respect as in the other. They have confined themselves, however, to a campaign of education and protection. They have opposed legislation calculated to abridge the civil rights of the people, and they will continue to oppose it, and to oppose it vigorously. But they have kept their cause out of politics. They have not undertaken politically to reward any man for agreeing with them, to punish politically any man for disagreeing.

A certain element of the school of medicine referred to, we regret to say, have by their conduct in the past earned the appellation of "political doctors." It would seem that their present course would have the effect of fastening this title upon them. They have taken a great risk in thus arraying themselves politically against those who for any one of thousands of reasons may honestly differ from them. The American people are quite prone to resent all exhibitions of arrogance and intolerance.

Those who are opposing this domination, we have reason to believe, are moved by ideals, aspirations and ambitions that reach far beyond the environment of any school, class or association, the primal aim being that of securing to every man, woman and child absolute exemption from the influence or operation of state or privileged medicine. Surely, persons who as political candidates are bitterly assailed because of their sympathy with such a cause will be compensated by increased support from liberal and honest-minded people.

Highway Building in New Brunswick

RECENTLY in St. John, N. B., a large meeting of representative citizens took up the matter of throwing open the country in a larger way to the sightseer, the investor and the settler. The temper of the gathering was such as to leave little doubt regarding the support that will come to the Flemming government in any scheme of highway construction upon which it may elect to enter. Townspeople and country people alike are demanding road construction on a large scale. It has become clear to them, as to the residents of the maritime provinces in general, that the most effective method of opening the areas of fertile land, now idle, to cultivation and development is to build roads through those areas that will enable the outside world to see and pass upon the territory.

At the present time the province is expending about $100,000 annually upon its highways; the municipalities an additional $60,000. This amount goes no further than to maintain those highways already in existence, and they are wholly inadequate. The province needs many miles of new trunk and branch lines. It could well afford to bond itself for these. The experience on this side of the line, and it is practically the same in Quebec and Ontario, and in other parts of the Dominion, is that good roads at once enhance the value of land and raise the tax valuation correspondingly.

New Brunswick and Nova Scotia are not at this time accessible to the automobile in any large sense. They should be. When they become so, the wisdom of highway investment will at once make itself apparent.

Future Campaign Funds, if Any

OUT of the inquiry into the whole subject of campaign fund contributions, in progress since the closing weeks of the last session of Congress, are certain to come some excellent results. It must be exceedingly gratifying to the country that the investigation had not proceeded far before the nature of the testimony deprived it of partizan color. Nothing could have been made clearer than the fact that the political organizations were equally responsible for the existence and maintenance of the vicious system. Moreover, it was also made to appear with clearness that the contributors, like the political organizations, were rather victims than beneficiaries of the custom of assessment and collection that had been growing up since the close of the civil war. It can be said with assurance that the corporations, no less than all right-minded persons in public life, hail with unqualified satisfaction what promises to be either the radical reformation of a practise that has been gaining in strength and in pernicious influence through ten presidential campaigns, or its total extirpation.

The Clapp committee, it is understood, will recommend with its report several reforms. These will embrace prohibition of contributions by any trust, large or small, or any corporation, to presidential, senatorial or congressional campaign funds, and of large individual contributions to such campaigns from any officer or director of any corporation. Provision, it is understood, will be made for publicity of all party treasury receipts. A limit will probably be placed upon the size of all individual contributions. All managers of campaigns are to be held to a much stricter accounting than they are now, not only as to the contributions received, but as to the manner of their disbursement, if the recommendations of the Clapp committee shall be approved and be made law.

It is doubtful if anything short of absolute prohibition of party or private expenditure upon political campaigns and elections will insure fair play to all candidates and absolute freedom of choice to the voter. The conditions under which a citizen may become a candidate should be defined by law; having once qualified, no matter how humble, or what his resources, he should have the benefit of machinery provided by the state for the conduct of primaries and elections. The welfare of the public is at stake at every election under the American political system; the public is more concerned than any person can be in the outcome; the public, therefore, should take the complete control and responsibility, and bear the entire cost, of all elections.

Money That Is Hidden Away

IT IS A FACT known to the United States treasury officials at Washington that many millions of dollars that should be in circulation are hidden away. This money should not be confused with that kept in safety deposit vaults, or with that "laid away" in some hiding place for a short time. Such money comes out periodically and helps to swell the circulation. The actual hidden money is that which does not come out at all, save when somebody discovers it, or when its hiding place is revealed by some testator. The amount that remains hidden, if in currency, can be fairly estimated by the treasury as the various issues of bills are withdrawn for any reason. Frequently, money that has long been out of circulation, and presumably hidden in the meantime, finds its way back. Its redemption must, of course, be always provided for. While the government has every reason to believe that it is many millions better off than the treasury balances indicate, by reason of the currency that is irretrievably lost or destroyed, the officials cannot, however, assume anything on this score. A call is likely to be made for the redemption of a large part of that money at any time.

There is no doubt now that the postal savings banks have brought much money out of hiding, and it is probable that not so much money will be misplaced or destroyed in the future, by reason of forgetfulness or lack of forethought on the part of its possessors, but it is not anticipated by those familiar with the facts that even the postal savings banks will be trusted by the habitual money hiders.

The interesting theory has been advanced that modern ways of living will eventually prevent money hiding. The old-fashioned dwelling, with its basement and cellar, its garret and attic, its rambling chambers, its closets and cubbyholes, is disappearing before the apartment and tenement, in neither of which is there much opportunity or place for the successful secretion of anything. Whether this theory will work out or not, the time should not be far distant when all governments, guided by the law of averages, should be able to measure pretty accurately the amount of the circulating medium withdrawn for hiding and to issue currency to take its place.

Fewer Expositions Henceforth

THE Monitor recently called attention to the conference to be held in Berlin, as neutral territory, where delegates from Europe, America and Japan were to discuss the exposition habit, and if possible lay down principles and rules that would guide governments in their relations to national and international fairs. Reports indicate that the conference has proved fairly successful, though the precise terms agreed upon have not been made public. A minimum interval between shows, if defined and lived up to, will have the effect of making such as are held better appreciated both by exhibitors and by visitors. If there can be some understanding as to the degree of pecuniary strength which must be shown by projectors prior to governmental recognition, it will choke off enterprises that in many cases in the past have failed because they were not worth supporting.

How the agreement perfected at this conference can be lived up to by powers like Germany and Japan it is not difficult to see; but what can the American government, through an executive department official, pledge that has the slightest binding power on Congress or on later Presidents? At the same time it is well that an American delegate attended the conference, and that as far as possible the United States stands committed to the new and more sensible policy. It will put a weapon in the hand of any President or lawmaker in the future with which he can fight against any untimely or senseless demand from any American city that the nation back it in an effort to have an "international" exposition.

Church and Police Reform

IN THREE large American cities recently leaders in shaping ethical ideals for the community have been forced to consider their duties as sharp critics of delinquent officials sworn to police the streets and to execute laws against vice and crime. The whole large problem of law enforcement and its obstruction by forces in the community that are politically and financially powerful has been faced, and the outcome has been a unity of opinion as to the goal to be achieved but considerable disagreement as to the method to be employed in compassing the desired end.

If for no other reason than that it has compelled the clergymen of forty or more sects in New York city to agree upon a joint petition to Mayor Gaynor concerning his future action, recent developments in that city's fight to secure an honestly administered police department would be notable. Steadily but surely under the pressure of changes in the city's racial and religious makeup, and of elimination from the population of the conservative middle-class, the metropolis has been approaching a moral crisis to meet which now calls for unity of action by all persons who believe in God and in man's moral obligations to his creator. The gravity of the peril is such that it is forcing good men and women, whatever their differing creeds, to unity of aim and action if thereby fundamentals of American civilization may be saved. Naturally there is an expectation that the mayor of the city, faced with such conditions in the police department as have been disclosed, will see to it that the rank and file are led by a police commissioner who is free to execute law and is not subject to dictation from politicians. It is for this that the local clergy are now petitioning unitedly.
